NEWLYWEDS ARE SEPARATED

Husband, Returning from Baltimore, Insists on Talking Politics.

JUMPS FROM TRAIN AFTER START

Wife Waits at Fremont for Coming of the Man She Had Wedded at Baltimore but a Short Time Before.

Mr. Newlywed was busily engaged in a "talkfest" with a fellow traveler at the Union station this morning. Yes, Mr. Newlywed was on his way home from Baltimore—he had been an onlooker at the democratic national convention, not a delegate. And listen—he had been caught in the matrimonial meshes while there, not by one of those Baltimore maids—she was a schoolgirl friend who had come over to the convention from Atlantic City.

Traveling friend and Mr. Newlywed soon forgot nuptial topics, however, and became busily engrossed in the progressive outlook and the possibilities of a third party. Mr. Newlywed was just summing up his arguments on the "steam roller" when a demure little hand tugged his sleeve and murmured something about train time. Hubby smiled sweetly, ignored the warning and continued his amateur political conversation.

Just then the Overland Limited gave an almost inaudible toot as a signal warning to start. Mrs. Newlywed hurried through the iron bars, expecting hubby to follow. Indeed, she kept on until she reached the "El Monte," one of the Pullmans about five cars from the rear. To the polite request of brass buttons she replied that hubby had the tickets. Already the Limited was creeping out from under the train shed.

Newlyweds Separated. Safely ensconced in the Pullman Mrs. Newlywed glanced back and saw hubby and his traveling friend walking nonchalantly through the gate. Of course he would catch the train. Mrs. Newlywed would stay in her seat until hubby found her just to worry him over his lack of attention.

By this time the Limited was making a fast dog trot gait and increasing its speed every minute. Hubby and the traveling man glanced at the moving train and "steam rollers," progressive parties and the recall of judges were forgotten.

They both started on a speedy Olympic sprint for the train, gained it and hopped aboard a Pullman about three cars to the rear of the El Monte.

"Have you seen my wife?" breathlessly queried Mr. Newlywed of the conductor. "No, sir," answered that individual, "This is a special car of Chicago business men bound for California."

One glance into the interior of the Pullman bore out the official's words. There were no women there. "We're on the wrong train," gasped the traveling friend when he heard the words "special, Chicago business men."

Mr. Traveling Man pulled on his Panama, scrambled for the step, hopped off and was followed by Mr. Newlywed minus a straw hat in the hasty exit.

It was only after a hurried conference with station officials that the political pair were convinced of their mistake. As a result Mrs. Newlywed is waiting in Fremont until the Los Angeles Limited comes along this afternoon with hubby.

Change of Venue in Estelle Libel Suit

Motion of the defendant for a change of venue in the $50,000 libel suit of Judge Estelle against the News was sustained by Judge Sutton, Leslie and Day in district court yesterday.

The judges said they probably would send the case to Dodge county, though upon request of the plaintiff it may be sent to Sarpy county.

The judges ordered Attorney Baxter for the defendant to prepare an order for change of venue to Dodge county, indicating that they may sign it, but before doing so may substitute Sarpy for Dodge.

Estabrook Looks Over His Omaha Interests

Henry D. Estabrook, former Omaha attorney, is in town looking after his property interests on Cass street between Sixteenth and Seventeenth. Mr. Estabrook is now holding out the law shingle in New York City. He arrived Monday morning and will return to New York today or Thursday.

OBJECTIONS ARE MADE TO BUILDING OF A SPUR

Attorney Maxwell of the Missouri Pacific and a property owner in the vicinity of Fifteenth and California streets appeared before the city council and urged the passage of an ordinance giving the railroad the right to lay a spur track on Fifteenth from California to Webster.

John F. Moriarty represented objecting property owners and declared in stating his case that the council had no power by statute to grant the request. The question was referred to the legal department for an opinion. Moriarty said if the request were granted he would carry it to the courts and fight it until an order was obtained for tearing up the track.

DEWEY RETURNS FROM CROSS-COUNTRY RUN

W. E. Dewey, local motorcycle expert, has returned from a record trip from Omaha to Reading, Pa. Mr. Dewey returned by train as he wished to prepare at once for a trip from San Francisco to New York to try to beat the world's record for that distance.

Mr. Dewey made the trip from Omaha to Reading in sixty-four hours running time, a distance of 1,663 miles. He found Iowa roads in good condition. The greatest days run was between Charleston, Ia., and Peoria, Ill., a distance of 388 miles which he accomplished in twelve hours. The hardest days run was from Pittsburg to Shippensburg, a distance of 188 miles, the greater portion of which was over the mountains.

This record from San Francisco to New York is now twenty-one days and eleven hours and Mr. Dewey will undertake to cover the route in eighteen days.

Tremendous Drop in Mint Juleps at South Omaha

During their entertainment at the South Omaha exchange, the visiting Nebraska editors were suddenly apprised of a tremendous drop in mint juleps.

The exhibit of home grown juleps was just the ticket for a dry, hot, midsummer day. There they stood in large, roomy glasses, with amber fluid filling the interstices of the ice, and embellished with a fat Emerald Isle cherry and a slice of juicy orange, topped off by a spray of fresh mint, rising high above the rim like a corn tassel, to say nothing of the brilliant dewdrops sparkling on the outside.

Guild Finds Iowa Corn in Fine Shape

Commissioner J. M. Guild of the Commercial club has returned from Lake Okoboji where he spent the Fourth with his family. The corn in Iowa, he declares is the best he has seen in all his recent travels over the country districts.

"In the good roads trip to Cheyenne I saw a great corn crop along the way, especially in Nebraska," he said, "but I believe Iowa has a little start on it. The crops all along the way to Okoboji were in the very best of conditions."

Citizens Are Divided on Paving Material

An open meeting of the city council will be held Thursday evening to give property owners on Mason street from Twenty-second to Twenty-fourth streets an opportunity to make arguments for the several kinds of pavements. COUNCIL OWNS WATER PLANT

Water Board Simply Has Supervision of the Works.

50 SAYS JUDGE BEN BAKER

Commissioners and Water Board Clash Over Authority in Tearing Up the Streets for New Mains.

Judge Ben Baker, city corporation counsel, told the city commission and the water board yesterday that extensions could not be made nor water mains laid by the water board without the consent of the council.

Judge Baker will render a written opinion in the case Friday. He said he looked up the law and found that the water board didn't own the water plant, but simply had supervision over it. He also asked for harmony because the question raised would readily permit of further litigation unless a compromise between the board and the council could be reached.

This opinion followed objections to laying the big forty-eight inch Florence main down Twenty-seventh street, made by B. J. Scannell and Neis J. Anderson. They declared the street "was filled up," as a huge sewer had been constructed in it and a six-inch water main laid over that.

Water Commissioner Howell, replying to a question from Commissioner Ryder as to whether the water board had ever contemplated consulting the council in the matter of tearing up streets to lay mains, said the question had been met with for the first time.

Mr. Howell invited the commission to inspect the plans, which he said would prove that Twenty-seventh was the logical street for the main. He said engineers had been brought here from St. Louis, examined the system of mains and designated Twenty-seventh street for the big pipe.

Further Mr. Howell asserted the water company had been building other mains, two of them thirty-six inches, with the intention of some time connecting with the forty-eight-inch main on Twenty-seventh. To change the plan now, he said, would mean added expense and a main of decreased efficiency, because a right angle turn would have to be made to run it down Twenty-eighth street, the next "most logical."

Judge Baker gave it his own opinion that the council should use its own judgment in naming conditions under which the water board should make extensions and lay new mains. This would compel the board to pay the cost of relaying streets torn up in the process of constructing such mains.

Democrats Drifting Back from the Big Baltimore Meeting

Louis J. Platt, Claude Bossie, Vincent McDonough and Charles E. Fanning have returned from a tour of the east, following their trip to the democratic national convention at Baltimore.

"I found sentiment very strong for Wilson in the east," said Mr. Platt. Even in New York City, with the exception of Tammany hall, the people seem to be for him generally.

Mr. Platt and the other members of the party visited at Niagara Falls, New York City and Norfolk, Va., where they concluded a trip by boat.
