Erich Anderson Sells City Strip of Land Near Railroad.

COUNCIL DISCUSSES CASE LONG

Have Difficult Time Coming to Terms Over Purchase—Burglar Enters Home of George Rahn and Makes Haul.

Although the grading of O street from Twenty-second street to the Missouri river was thought to have been completed, the members of the city council, who sat as a board of equalization yesterday, were forced to pay Erich Anderson $100 for a strip of land adjoining the Burlington right-of-way on the west. The plot, which is fifty feet wide and forty-four feet long, is a portion of a tax lot and takes up the width of the street.

The board spent yesterday afternoon investigating the grading. Considerable trouble was met with among the councilmen over the purchase of the tract. A viaduct will have to be built over the railroad tracks and some were in favor of building the crossing over Anderson's piece of land instead of purchasing it.

A petition signed by a large number of the property owners on O street protesting against levying a grading tax, has been received by the board. The petition states the grading of the street is not complete and the tax irregular. No action has yet been taken.

The street has been graded within a few blocks of the river. When the agitation to open O street through to the river was first started a plan was on foot to build a bridge across the river. While this would undoubtedly have been a good thing for the city, those who were going to finance the deal backed out after work on the street had been started.

Sunday afternoon he met the New girl in Omaha and promised to marry her if she went to South Omaha with him. She has been living with her uncle at Twentieth and Isard streets, Omaha. Her aunt has treated her very harshly of late, and it was due to this fact that she readily agreed to marry Hammett.

He took her to a room on lower N street, where they were arrested by Gillan last evening.

Rahn's House Robbed.
Burglars entered the home of George Rahn, 826 North Nineteenth street, early Monday morning and stole a gold watch, a diamond stick pin and $4 in money. Entrance was gained by cutting through a screen in the kitchen.

Scenes of Disorder Mark Darrow Trial

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 10.—Scenes of disorder marked today's session of the trial of Clarence S. Darrow. Opposing counsel precipitated the trouble, which centered around Job Harriman, called as a witness for the defense. Chief Counsel Rogers for the defense and Assistant District Attorney Ford were fined for contempt, but the fines were remitted. Harriman, who was the socialist candidate for mayor of Los Angeles last fall as well as an associate counsel in the McNamara case, was called to the stand and denied that he had given Darrow the $4,000 which Franklin confessed to bribing George N. Lockwood or that he had even seen Franklin or Darrow.

Moorehead Silent Until Demos Meet

John H. Moorehead, democratic candidate for governor, in Omaha Tuesday, said he did not expect to have much to say politically until after the convention at Grand Island July 30. He would not say whether he would have any suggestions to make as to plans to be put in the platform, and only remarked that he would stand for a good progressive platform in the state in harmony with the progressive platform adopted by the national convention. Mr. Moorehead is to speak at a democratic meeting to be held in South Omaha Saturday evening.

Winter Hats Here

With the thermometer 100 degrees Fahrenheit a progressive shop on Sixteenth street is displaying a window filled with winter hats.

There are felt ones of dainty shades, pale pink, blue and lavender, trimmed with bands of white plush and bands of white feathers dotted with small black feathers.

The tricorered or continental shapes are most numerous, and they are both chic and becoming. These come in darker shades of navy blue and red, and many are trimmed with white mercury wings.

Although many feminine shoppers purchased panamas and other summer hats within the last fortnight, as soon as the winter hats were shown they made selections. Those who are going to cooler climates decided that the new hats would be appropriate and useful.
