ROSAMOND

CLAUDE, MY HERO, VILLANI MUST DIE

HORRIBLE DEATH

HATE HIM

I.-THE HUE AND CRY. Under the grandstand of the Olympic arena a thrilling drama is being enacted. The villain Desmond, having been foiled in an effort to kill Rosamond, has been spotted by Claude Eclaire, who is now hot on the heels of the scoundrel. Desmond is afraid to leave the shelter of the stand, as the athletes are outside, and he has not much room in which to II .- A CHANCE TO HIDE. As Desmond rushes to and fro seeking a means of escape, he notices a pile of old programs which have been dropped and swept down from the seats above in the grandstand. The idea comes to him that he might hide under the papers and thus escape the keen eye of Claude Eclaire, humiliating as it is for a firstclass villain to have to take refuge in a pile of dirty paper.

III .- A SURREPTITIOUS PUFF. Far above in the grandstand the rooters are cheering on their various heroes

GEE, HERE'S COMES THE USHER I'LL

in the contests of the Olympic games. Despite the excitement of the struggle, one of the spectators cannot restrain his desire for a smoke, so he lights a cigar, although it is strictly against the rules to smoke up there. The appearance of an usher causes him to drop his burning cigar through a hole in the boards.

DESMOND VILLAIN HAS ES CRAWL OUT, YOU CAPED US SOMEPLACE THIS GRAND I CAN SEE NO TRACE OF THE COWARD FOILED AND SNAKE FOILED AND AH, AH THE LOVER ING ME B

IV .- THE RUSE SUCCEEDS. In the meantime Claude Eclaire and Rosamond rush about below the grandstand in eager search for the villain Desmond. As they pass the pile of old programs, now bigger that it was a few moments before, they little suspect that concealed there is a scoundrel for whose capture they are so eager. The villain's ruse appears to have succeeded; but observe the cigar that is falling.

V .- A BLAZING REFUGE That lighted cigar thrown away by a careless smoker has worked wonders for Claude and his sweetheart. It has set fire to the heap of programs under which Desmond was lurking, and the scoundrel is driven out by the blaze. He is forced to crawl right into the hands of his enemy, Claude Eclaire, from whom he can expert no mercy. A sad experience for a villain high in his profession.

VI.-BOUND FAST. "Ah ban the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "and the yig ant ban up yet." Bound securely and in the iron grasp of Claude Eclaire, the villain does not yet admit defeat. He even declares that Rosamond must yet be his wife, despite her hero lover. A tough villain is Desmond, and a hard one to hit. In tomorrow's pictures we shall show the fate Claude decrees him.
