At a session of the commission today sympathy with the raise in rates. an order was issued requiring the company to rebuild the depot and construct of the depot and other improvements. Railway Commissioner T. L. Hall re-

Mr. Hall was a passenger on the rear Puil-man of the coach that later on was telestoped in the wreck near Chicago, and left the train at Lincoln. He became acquainted with several of the passengers who were injured in the wreck, and he says that he is more than ever convinced that there should be some way to stop the fast running of trains, especially in the more thickly settled communities. "We are so crazy over the speed problem." Said Mr. Hall, "that we are for-more thickly settled communities."

BIG IRRIGATION PUMP IS WORKING WONDERS

SIDNEY, Neb., July 15 .- Water Commissioner R. A. Blake was at Lodgepole and Chappell, Monday, on business connected with his office. While there A. G. Neaumann of Crappell, gave a demonstration with his new irrigation pump which has just been installed at a cost of $1,200. With this he irrigates over 300 acres of hay, alfalfa and farm land. This large machine throwing 4,800 gallonds of water per minutes, is worth going far to see. There was to have been a public demonstration Wednesday but Mr. Blake failed to get notice in time and as he did not want to go back Wednesday, the demonstration was made Monday. About twenty interested spectators were present. These irrigation pumps are doing wonders and it will not be many years until the whole Lodgepole valley and tributaries will be dotted with them, making it one of the richest valleys east of the mountains. At present there are six irrigating plants in Mr. Blake's districtthree in Deuel county and three in Cheyenne county. There are several others now under consideration.

SIMPLE CHARMS OF PERSIA

Muleteers Speak in Verses, Horse Play with Children and Flowers Abound.

"Persia is essentially a land of the sun." said Sir Mortimer Durand, "and I noticed when I was in Persia that Europeans who had lived there for a time were always anxious to go back." There is no need, and little incentive, to travel fast in Persia. For one thing there are no opportunities to do so, and when one becomes used to camping with camels and mules one prefers that to railway luxury. Why build a road, was the question of an amazed tribesman, whose soul recoiled at the thought of a straight line of beaten track. It was really a nulsance, for "there were no stones where the feet could hold on by," he explained. Among the Arabs of the plains the reason for the docility and gentleness of their horses is easily discovered. The animals play with the children, know them and understand them, with the result that there is a bond between man and beast rarely seen elsewhere.

"In Simla" said the lecturer had an Arab horse which used to come of Persia?" asked Sir Mortimer Durand. Bowers, the commissioner of fisheries in walking into the house. He would walk in at a dinner party and put his head tween everything about him and all that take, enlighten your ignorance, project over your shoulder for a bit of bread he has left behind."-London Standard. quite naturally. But it may not have been good for the carpets." On the mountainsides the horses are as surcfooted as goats and will leap from rock to rock with their riders with cool as-

There is no need for a "back to the land" movement in Persia. The people have never left it, and the Persian peasant is one of the happlest in the world. Some of the tribes know no other bread than that made from acorns. They steep the acorns in running water for a time. and then break them up and manufacture their bread with the same deliberation as they murmur their poetry.

One is led to the conclusion that the country creates poets automatically. Only a churl would refuse to be a poet in a land where blue sky looks down on winter snow and oxen tread out the corn. Even in the night the traveler has the chirp of the little owl for a lullaby and the bells of the mules for a solace.

But by a peculiar law which is past comprehension Omar Khayyam is almost ignored. His poems do not find such ready response among his modern countrymen as they find in the west. Even the late shah repudiated them, and laughed when his name was mentioned by Sir Mortimer Durand. "I was asked by the Omar society."

he said, "to see if the shah would cause Omar's grave to be set in repair, but when I spoke to the old shah during an audience he sat in his chair and laughed 'Why,' he cried, 'do you mean to tell me that there is a society in England connected with Omar Khayyam? The man has been dead a thousand years! I can tell you of many better poets than he." But the admirers of Omar have the satisfaction of knowing that, though the shah laughed at the poet, no one even aughed at the shah. Perhaps the most fascinating part of the lecture was a rapid outline of a Persian year. At the end of February the garden is full of violets, and after the violets pass away the water channels are lined with white iris, and after come the nightingales, which sing while the sleeper sleeps.

Every known flower may grow in Persian soil, and most of the European ones do, while the early summer is a riot of color. The autumn tints are more vivid than any in the world, except, per-
