One of the first tasks that tired Nature begins to slight is digestion. No matter if one is careful what he eats and drinks, and what hours he keeps, if he puts too great a strain on his system by overwork or worry, he is likely to find that his stomach is failing him. Nature needs all her strength to do the extra work he is imposing on her, and takes from the stomach the energy she needs elsewhere. Then sour stomach, burning, loss of appetite, pain and sometimes constipation, sometimes diarrhoea, follow.

"Try-New-Life" gives instant relief, and not only is the pain stopped, but normal digestion is renewed.
