Anticipating a Bequest.
In the latter part of the civil war Basil Gildersleeve lay on a day apparently at the point of death, surrounded by several members of his family. "Brother," he murmured faintly, "I have at most only a few days to live, and when I am laid to rest I want you to have my new pair of boots in the closet yonder. I never talk about it, but I cannot bear to talk about them--they hurt too much. However, I do not mind telling about those two men."

Looking Forward.
The husband and wife were making a call on friends one evening. The wife was talking. "I think we shall have Marian take a domestic science course along with her music and regular studies when at college." "Oh," said a man present, who had been a stranger until that evening, "you look rather young to have a daughter ready for college."

Seven Balloons in Trial for Big aRce

KANSAS CITY, July 27--Seven huge gas balloons manned by the premier pilots of America, ascended from aviation field here late today in a race to determine what three of the number shall journey to Stuttgart, Germany this fall to compete with foreign sportsmen in an effort to regain for America the James Gordon Bennett trophy, last year when a German balloon won the race. The pilot balloon Kansas City III (noncontaminant) carrying Dr. Milo E. Hartman and Miss Violet Davis of Kansas City on the first leg of their honeymoon trip, preceded the seven bags aloft to show the way for the contestants. The couple was married just before the race began.

end. I do not even remember the name of his station, but I know it was somewhere near Fargo. We halted each other for the last time as the train passed on, and I noticed then how worn his clothes were.
"A few minutes after we left his town the old lady visited me again. She had something better than gentle words that time--she had money--a ten-dollar bill. The man had entrusted it to her to give to me. It was a little sum--only ten dollars--but it looked as big as the side of a house to me then, and I have no doubt that it looked equally big to the man, and that I meant quite a sacrifice to part with it. I have often wished that I could thank him, but there has been no way. I do not know his address. I do not know his name, but he kept me from actual want in the kindest, most delicate way a man could devise to assist a woman, and with all my heart I bless him for it.
"The Adams street man was also a friend in need. He overlook me one day when I was going down town expecting something to come my way that day, but nothing did. I had expected a letter with money in it; there was none. I had expected work; I got none. I was literally at the end of the tether and things looked desperately dark.
"House in the shadow of a big wholesale house not far from the bridge the man came up and spoke to me. I supposed he meant to strike up a flirtation, although why on earth anybody should want to flirt with such a distressed looking creature as I was then I cannot imagine. I don't remember what he said, but whatever it was it set me crying. I was so miserable that it didn't take much to do that.
"Then presently I talked. I must have been out of my senses to talk so to a perfect stranger, I told him, in an incoherent sort of way, that I had been disappointed about the work and about the letter, and that I was going back to the child with nothing--absolutely nothing.
"He stepped back and looked at me aghast.
"Good God!" he said. "Good God!"
"Then I felt him press something into my hand.
"You poor child," he said. "Take this for a Christmas present for the boy--it lacked but a few days to Christmas--and may heaven help you."
"Before I could clear by eyes of tears he had gone, but had left a five-dollar bill in my hand. I never saw the man again. I wouldn't know him even if I saw him, but I bless him, too. Of course, many others have crossed my path whom I remember gratefully, for the world is running over with people who are helpful and kind, but somehow those two men seem different from all the rest. It may sound queer to hear me speak of them so--no doubt it does--but I should be a despicable ingrate if I ever forgot them, and no matter who they are or what they are they will have somebody to pray for them as long as I live.
"His hostess wiped her eyes on the pillow case, and the first thing she knew she was praying for a score of people who had been kind to her--New York Times.

REMEMBERED IN HER PRAYERS

Woman's Hard Luck Story and Its Effect on Inquisitive Friend.
When the two women who had not stayed all night together for twelve years got ready to go to bed the older woman said:
"You don't mind my saying my prayers out loud, do you? Somehow I have had a very foolish notion about praying for the last few years. I imagine God can hear me better if I say things out loud."
The hostess for the night said, "Certainly not," and there was a guilty tremor in her voice as she said it, for she remembered that it had been a long while since she had said her prayers out loud or any other way except when at church. She listened, half in tears, half in awe, to the low voice of the older woman, but when the last sentence was reached she sat up in genuine surprise.
"God bless that man whom I saw on the Northern Pacific railroad and the one that I met that day on Adams street in Chicago," prayed the older woman.
The hostess did not say anything until the lights were turned out. Then she said:
"I don't want to appear inquisitive, but if you don't mind I wish you would tell me what you meant by praying for those two men just now. Don't tell if you would rather not, but it really did sound queer."
The older woman lay silent for so long that the hostess feared she had offended her, and began an apology, but the other interposed.
"Oh, that is all right," she said; "I don't mind telling. You already know, in a vague way, that I have had a pretty hard time in the last twelve years. How hard you can never know. If I should tell you you wouldn't be able to understand. The things that happened in the first part of that period I never talk about; I cannot bear to talk about them--they hurt too much. However, I do not mind telling about those two men.
"Of them came east over the Northern Pacific road when I did. I do not know his name. I was so worried that I didn't pay much attention to him--I paid so little attention, in fact, that five minutes after he had left the train I could not remember what he looked like. I have a faint remembrance that he was short and slight and rather poorly dressed, and that he had a very kind face. He must have had a kind face, because my boy took such a fancy to him. The child was a little fellow then; only 8 months old, and he grew very fretful on the long trip. When people found I was traveling across the American continent alone they were very kind and offered to help take care of the child, but nobody could do much except that man, because the child would not go to anybody but him. Hour after hour he tended him when I got tired out, but still I scarcely gave the man a second thought, although, of course, I was grateful to a tired, listless sort of way.
"I did, however, open my heart to a little old lady, who was also kind and I told her that I should probably reach Chicago almost penniless, and that I did not know what I should do. Shortly after confiding in her the man came and said good-bye. We were nearing his station, and he wished me a safe journey and the rest of the way and good luck at the
