TAFT OUTLINES HIS CAMPAIGN PLANS AT NOTIFICATION MEET

the republican candidate for president for the term beginning March 4, 1913. "For the second time in the history of the republican party a part of the delegates have refused to be bound by the action of the convention. Now, as on the former occasion, the irreconcilable minority declares its intention to support either your democratic opponent, or a third candidate. The reason assigned for this course is dissatisfaction with the decision of certain contests in the making up of the temporary roll of the convention. These contests were decided by the tribunal upon which the law that has governed the republican party for more than forty years imposed the duty of deciding such contests.

Honesty Beyond Question.
"So long as those decisions were made honestly and in good faith, all persons were bound to accept them as conclusive in the making up of the temporary roll of the convention, and neither in the facts and arguments produced before the national committee, the committee on credentials and the convention itself, nor otherwise, does there appear just ground for impeaching the honesty and good faith of the committee's decisions. Both the making up of the temporary roll, and the right accorded to the persons upon that roll, whose seats were contested, were in accordance with the long established and unquestioned rules of law governing the party, and founded upon justice and common sense. Your title to the nomination is as clear and unimpeachable as the title of any candidate of any party since political conventions began.

"Your selection has a broader basis than a mere expression of choice between different party leaders representing the same ideas. You have been nominated because you stand pre-eminently for certain fixed and essential principles which the republican party maintains. You believe in perpetuating the constitutional government of the United States. You believe in the rule of law rather than the rule of men. You realize that the only safety for nations, as for individuals, is to establish and abide by declared principles of action.

Stands for Right.
"You are in sympathy with the great practical rules of right conduct that the American people have set up for their own guidance and self-restraint in the limitations of the constitution, the limitations upon governmental and official power essential to the preservation of liberty and justice. You know that to sweep away those wise rules of self-restraint would not be progress, but decadence. You know that the great declarations of principles in our constitution cannot be made an effectual guide to conduct in any other way than by judicial judgment upon attempts to violate them; and you maintain the independence, dignity and authority of the courts of the United States. You are for progress along all the lines of national development, but for progress which still preserves the good we already have and holds fast to those essential elements of American institutions which have made our country prosperous and great and free. You represent the spirit of kindly consideration by every American citizen toward all his fellows, respect for the right of adverse opinion, peaceable methods of settling differences—the spirit and method which make ordered and peaceful self-government possible as distinguished from intolerance and hatred and violence.

"In respect of all these things our country is threatened from many sides. It is your high privilege to be the standard bearer for the cause in which you believe; and in that cause of peace and justice and liberty the millions of your countrymen who believe as you do will stand with you, and the great party which was born in the struggle for constitutional freedom will support you."

President Taft's Address.
President Taft in his formal speech of acceptance of the nomination of the Chicago convention defined in detail the issues of the campaign as he saw them, but he reserved the right to amplify his statements in a letter as the campaign develops.

The supreme issue that confronts the voters, the president declared, was that of the maintenance of the nation's institutions and the preservation of the constitution. He said, on the one hand by the democratic party and on the other by those republicans who had left the party to try their fortunes in a new one.

Next in importance Mr. Taft placed the tariff. In the proposals of the democrats for reductions in the present schedule, he said, lay danger of business depression and hard times. The republican principle of revision only where scientific investigation shows it necessary marked the straight road to continued prosperity and commercial peace.

In discussing the tariff the president said that it was untrue that to its door could be traced the high cost of living and pointed out that conditions of living were alike over the world. A political promise could not remedy such a condition, he said.

Regulation of Trusts.
As an issue only less important than the tariff the president placed the regulation of trusts. He said the Sherman law had been enforced with success but added that specific acts of unfair trade should be denounced as misdemeanors that such acts might be avoided or when committed punished by summary procedure. Interstate business enterprises he said should be offered a federal incorporation law.

Aside from these issues the president pointed to the record of the republican party and particularly during his own administration as an earnest of what it might be expected to do in the future if the people returned it to power in November. He attacked the democrats at other points than the tariff, making special reference to the refusal of that party in the house of representatives to continue the naval policy of two battleships a year. Taft did not mention either Colonel Roosevelt or Governor Woodrow Wilson by name but referred to each. While he did not accuse either of embracing the doctrines of socialism, many of the proposals they had made, the president said, savored of it strongly. He closed with a review of his administrative achievements and appealed directly to the conservative voters of the democratic party to join with the republicans at the polls.

Appeal to Democrats.
"I know that in this wide country there are many who call themselves democrats, who view, with the same aversion that we republicans do, the radical propositions of change in our form of government that are recklessly advanced to satisfy what is supposed to be popular clamor," said the president. "They are men who reverse the constitution and the institutions of their government with all the love and respect that we could possibly have, men who deprecate disturbance in business conditions, and are yearning for that quiet from demagogic agitation which is essential to the enjoyment by the whole people of the great prosperity which the good crops and the present conditions ought to bring us.

"To them I appeal, as to all republicans, to join us in an earnest effort to avert the political and economic revolution and business paralysis which republican defeat will bring about. Such misfortune will fall most heavily on the wage earner. May we not hope that he will see what his real interest is, will understand the shallowness of attacks upon existing institutions and deceitful promises of undefined benefit by undefined changes?"

Accepts Nomination as Approval.
"I accept it," he began, "as an approval of what I have done under its mandate and as an expression of confidence that in a second administration I will serve the public well. The issues presented to the convention over which your chairman presided with such a just and even hand, made a crisis in the party's life. A faction sought to force the party to violate a valuable and time-honored national tradition by entrusting the power of the presidency for more than two terms to one man, and that man, one whose recently avowed political views would have committed the party to radical proposals involving dangerous changes in our present constitutional form of representative government and our independent judiciary. This occasion is appropriate for the expression of profound gratitude at the victory for the right won at Chicago. By that victory the republican party was saved for future usefulness."

After reviewing the legislative enactments of the republican party the president launched into a bitter attack upon "those responsible for the popular unrest" of the present day.

"Started by sensational journalism and unjust and unprincipled muckraking," he said, "demagogues have seized the opportunity to inflame the public mind that they might turn peculiar conditions to their own advantage." In the formation of new parties, the president said, these men have promised the satisfaction of unrest by the application of a panacea.

Outcome of Agitation.
"In the ultimate analysis, I fear, the equal opportunity which those seek who proclaim the so-called social justice involves a forced division of property, and that means socialism. I venture to say there is no national administration in which more real steps of progress have been taken than in the present one. But as for the millennium, a condition in which the rich are to be made reasonably poor and the poor reasonably rich by law, we are chasing a phantom; we are holding out to those, whose unrest we fear, a prospect and a dream, a vision of the impossible.

"I do not say that the two gentlemen who now lead, one the democratic party and the other the former republicans who have left their party, in their attempts upon existing conditions, and in their promises of remedies, are consciously embracing socialism. The truth is that they do not offer any definite legislation or policy by which the happy conditions they promise are to be brought about, but if their promises mean anything, they lead directly toward the appropriation of what belongs to one man, to another.

Just on Their Way.
"The truth is, my friends, both those who have left the republican party under the inspiration of their present leader, and our old opponents, the democrats, under their candidate, are going in a direction they do not definitely know, toward an end they cannot definitely describe, with but one chief and clear object and that is of acquiring power for their party by popular support through the promise of a change for the better."

"These gentlemen propose to reform the government, whose present defects, if any, are due to the failure of the people to devote as much time as is necessary to their political duties, by requiring a political activity by the people three times that which thus far the people have been willing to assume.

"But after we have changed all the governmental machinery so as to permit instantaneous expression of the people in constitutional amendments, in statutes and in recall of public agents, what then?

"Votes are not bread, constitutional amendments are not work, referendums do not pay rent or furnish houses, recalls do not furnish clothing, initiatives do not supply employment or relieve inequalities of condition or of opportunity. We still ought to have set before us the definite plan to bring on complete equality of opportunity and to abolish hardship and evil for humanity. We insist for them in vain."

What Republicans Stand For.
"The republican party," concluded the president, "stands for none of these innovations. It refuses to make changes simply for the purpose of making a change and cultivating popular hope that in the change something beneficial, undefined, will take place. We favor the greatest good to the greatest number. We believe that we have made progress from the beginning to now and that the progress is to continue into the far future; that it is reasonable progress that experience has shown to be really useful and helpful, and from which there is no reaction to something worse. It is said that this is not an issue in the campaign. It seems to me it is the supreme issue."

YOU SHOULDN'T HAVE GRAY HAIR
It Can Be Nicely Darkened by a Simple Home Mixture

There is really no reason why people should keep their gray hair, even if we can't prevent its coming. Of course many of the hair preparations in the stores are objectionable, but fortunately we don't have to depend upon this means of relief. Here is a simple little recipe which anyone can make up in their own home, and it meets every requirement of a rational and effective hair darkener: To 7 ozs. of water add one small box of Barbo Compound, 1 oz. of bay rum and 1/2 oz. of glycerine. Your nearest drug store can supply these ingredients at little cost, which you can mix yourself. Apply the preparation to the hair or beard once a week until the desired dark shade is obtained, then use once every two weeks. It is also a fine remedy for dandruff and other scalp diseases, and you will be delighted with the soft glossy "young-looking" appearance it gives the hair. It has none of the stickiness of most hair preparations and neither rubs off or colors the skin. However, you must take no substitute for Barbo Compound.

Iowa Drys Fail to Revise Ticket

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Aug. 1.—The proposed move of the state prohibition convention to oust C. Durant Jones of Perry as candidate for governor failed to materialize at the closing session today. Attempts to remove K. W. Brown of Ames and O. D. Elliott of Marshalltown as members of the national committee also failed.

Malcom Smith of Cedar Rapids was endorsed for United States senator. An attempt to endorse Attorney General Cosson, a republican was defeated, and J. A. Harvey of Perry was named for that office. J. W. Leedy of Oskaloosa was nominated for state superintendent of schools and William Orr of Clarinda and H. F. Jones of Woodbine for judges of the supreme court.

Resident Burned at Iowa Falls.
IOWA FALLS, Ia., Aug. 1.—(Special.)—A bad fire early yesterday morning practically destroyed the home of E. A. Gardner of the firm of Kennedy, Gardner & Co. The fire was discovered by the maid who was sleeping in the upper story and she quickly called to Mr. Gardner who, with his family, was sleeping in a tent in the back yard. Mr. Gardner hastened to the back door, but was driven back by the smoke and flames. The maid sought exit by the stairway, but was cut off by the fire and had to be rescued from an upper window. The dwelling belongs to Mrs. John Weaver and was insured for $2,000. The household goods were insured for $1,000. The estimated loss on the dwelling is $3,000 and on the contents total.

A stalk of corn is on exhibition at Dull's grocery, raised by Clyde Stout living two miles south of Glenwood. It is thirteen feet in height and has two well developed ears, one eight and the second eight feet six inches from the ground. During the last term of school before the summer vacation, the report of Superintendent Masters will show that only two boys of school age were not regular school attendants out of 2,150. There will be a loss in children of school age since 1911 of eighty-seven boys and fifty-seven girls in Mills county.

SMALLER SHIPMENTS TO THE HOG MARKETS

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 1.—(Special Telegram.)—Price Current says the market supply of hogs has been further moderately reduced. The tendency to smaller shipments at this time in the year may be regarded as usual and the enlarging movement may not develop until some weeks later. Total western slaughtering reached 405,000 hogs, compared with 438,000 the preceding week. For a corresponding time last year the number was 450,000. From March 1 the total is 10,900,000, against 12,150,000 a year ago, a decrease of 1,250,000 hogs. The quality of marketed stock is good and weights are showing better than earlier in the season. Prices of hogs had an advancing tendency during several days. Prominent markets at the close indicated a general average of $7.50 per 100 pounds, against $7.70 a week ago.
