Yom Kippur, Jewish day of atonement, began last evening and continues all day today. There were services at Temple Israel last evening at which Rabbi Frederick Cohn spoke on "The Soul of Israel." There will be two services at the temple, today, one beginning at 9:30 a. m., at which Rabbi Cohn will speak on "The New Conscience," and a memorial service in commemoration of the dead in the afternoon at 3:30. Rabbi Cohn's address for this service is entitled "Though He Slay Me."

The Orthodox Churches.
Likewise in all orthodox Jewish churches Yom Kippur is observed with special services. The orthodox churches are Chevre B'nai Israel, Twelfth and Nicholas streets; Beth Hamedrosh Hagodal, Nineteenth and Burt streets, and B'nai Jacob, at Twenty-fourth and Seward streets. Each of these congregations has secured the services of special cantors, or prayer readers. Yom Kippur services began at 6 o'clock last evening and continue for twenty-four hours. The strict orthodox Jews fast throughout these twenty-four hours, partaking of neither food nor drink.
