

Supreme in Results —Pleasant in Use

Oxypathy Face Cream is the first real aid to maintaining the natural pink, velvety beauty of the skin. Healthy skin is beautiful—it needs no aid. A blemished skin is an unhealthy skin. Oxygen is the one great builder of skin health. It makes the skin fresh and beautiful. But our "smoky" atmosphere is deficient in Oxygen. Oxypathy Face Cream is the remedy. It brings Oxygen in the most available form.

Removes The correct and scientific blending of newly discovered compounds high in all common Oxygen bearing capacity alone makes this possible. These ingredients with the addition of other wisely selected substances all manipulated by masters in modern Oxygen formulating give a purifying, vitaminizing, soothing and superior in action. Oxygen is a selective antiseptic—in contact with healthy tissues it is inactive oxygen—in contact with the ferments in diseased tissues and tissue secretions a slight chemical action changes it to active oxygen. Fatty, blemished, unhealthy skin is due to the clogging of the pores by fat, fatty acids, cell debris and other waste. When Oxypathy Face Cream is used the oxygen comes directly in contact with this waste tissue. Meeting the ferments in the waste it is turned active and proceeds to oxidize (or burn up) the waste—thus opening and cleansing the pores and leaving the skin clean and healthy.

It is luxurious to use—pure white, velvety, faintly violet scented—the cream de luxe. Send for free introductory and liberal sample of it and one of Oxypathy Toilet Soap (equally beneficial), also our informing book, "Building Skin Beauty With Oxypathy." Gives expert, practical advice on building a fresh, healthy and beautiful complexion. It will be sent with the compliments of

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson

SHOULD Mrs. Woodrow Wilson be the next mistress of the White House, Washington society will be treated to a reign of rational hospitality of the sort that is characteristic of American home life; for the wife of the Democratic nominee for the Presidency is essentially domestic. She shrinks from the limelight of publicity, and her greatest happiness is found in her home environment. Mrs. Wilson is charming in mind and manner and, like her husband, very democratic. From every point of view, she is of the type we love to call American. The daughter and granddaughter of Southern clergymen, she inherited the sterling qualities of the early settlers.

Her conspicuous talent is in the field of pictorial art. She might well have made painting her vocation, for her work at the Art Students' League of New York, prior to her marriage in 1885, gave promise of brilliant success; but Dr. Cupid planned differently, and before completing her course she became the wife of Woodrow Wilson, a son of the Rev. Joseph R. Wilson of Virginia.

With her daughters, Jessie, Eleanor and Margaret, grown to womanhood, she has once more turned her attention to painting, specializing in landscapes. So successful has she been in this line, that at different times her friends have vainly besought her to exhibit her canvases.

An additional proof of Mrs. Wilson's love of the artistic is to be found in her formal gardens at Princeton and Sea Girt, N. J. She is a very clever landscape gardener, self taught, but sufficiently endowed with a feeling for beautiful flower harmonies to produce the most gratifying results. If the turn of Fortune's wheel places her in the White House as the "first lady of the land," the flower gardens there are likely to come under the personal supervision of their mistress, quite a novelty in White House management.

Her daughters, well endowed educationally, are now old enough to be following their individual bents. Until they had reached ten years of age, they were taught at home, both parents contributing.

Miss Jessie, said to have inherited her father's quick wit, wears a Phi Beta Kappa key, received as an honor member of her class at the Baltimore Woman's College, where she was graduated. She once longed to be a missionary; but her health hardly warranted the trip to far lands, and she took up settlement work. She is now on the National Board of the Y. W. C. A. Miss Eleanor—Nell, her friends call her—prepared for the Baltimore Woman's College, but after attending school at St. Mary's, Raleigh, N. C., took up painting at the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts. Miss Margaret is the athletic member of the family. She is an expert tennis, golf and basketball player. She has a fine voice and is now perfecting herself in voice culture in New York.—Harriet Gillespie.

A Lighthouse Heroine

There are many women in charge of lighthouses on the coast of California. Most of them have been in the service for a long time; several are widows of officers of the United States Navy. Mrs. Juliet E. Nichols, widow of the late Henry E. Nichols, U. S. N., inspector of lighthouses at the time of his death, has kept the Angel Island light station for nine years. The lighthouse is located on the south-westerly extremity of Angel Island, in the direct path of the greatest amount of navigation in San Francisco Bay. In addition to the lantern, she has charge of a fog signal, consisting of a bell that strikes a double blow every fifteen seconds. A few years ago, Mrs. Nichols showed heroism in a desperate emergency.

The machinery of the fog signal became disabled. It was immediately reported to the lighthouse inspector and the engineer; but they could not repair it until the next day. So, she stood for twenty and a half hours upon the outside platform of the lighthouse, during the gale and fog, without rest or food, and struck the bell by hand until the fog lifted. The next day, slight repairs were made on the machinery; but it did not work well that night, and the next night the tension bar broke in two, so that the hammer could not be disconnected and operated by hand. She stood all night on the platform and struck the bell with a nail hammer, with all her might. Nobody can tell how many vessels were warned off the rocks by hearing that signal; but it is in the midst of a thoroughfare, and Mrs. Nichols realized that the silence of the fog bell might cause many disasters.—Ella Hoffman.
