WAIT PREPARING BALLOT

Secretary of State Compiles it in Two Ways for Electors.

SAYS LAW IS NOT EXPLICIT

Declares it Cannot Be Followed Literally Owing to the Mixup in Political Situation This Year.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, Oct. 15.—(Special.)—Secretary of State Wait has prepared two drafts of the manner in which the presidential electors should appear upon the ballot, neither of which is given authority by law.

The law provides that the eight electors of each party shall be grouped under the designation of the respective parties. Therefore in the present instance the law cannot be followed because not all of the electors on the republican ticket for instance, are supporting the republican candidates for the presidency, but a part of them are avowed supporters of the candidacy of a candidate of another party.

Following is one of the drafts of the ballot prepared by the secretary of state, which complies with the law as far as grouping the electors according to their choice for the presidency. It will be noted that a voter who desires to vote for President Taft will find two of the Taft electors, those who have been regularly selected at the primary, at the top under the head "republican."

Progressives who desire to vote for Roosevelt will find six of their candidates under the head "republican-progressive" and the other two down next to the bottom under the head "progressives."

more simple manner of grouping them and one which will give each voter a chance to find his electors without hunting them out from among the others. They are grouped with the electors at large first and the others follow according to congressional districts:

Electors of United States Decide to Stand by Taft.

BOLD THREATS BY THE MOOSE

Reprisal Threatened Against Big Business in Statement About Administering Abyssinian Treatment to Various Concerns.

By CHARLES D. HILLES, Chairman of the Republican National Committee.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(Special.)—Uncle Sam's prosperity league has nearly a month left in which to re-elect William H. Taft president, and indications point more clearly every day to that result. The Taft campaign has been one of growing satisfaction. Beginning at low ebb, with the Roosevelt bolt, it has constantly improved, giving encouragement and hope to an army of substantial citizens, who could not be led astray by the call of the Bull Moose nor hypnotized by the sophistry of a theoretical college professor with William J. Bryan as his political appendix.

When there is a circus in town it is difficult to interest the office boy in anything except his grandmother.

The voters of the United States have been to the circus, they have enjoyed the antics of the democratic donkey and the third term Moose, but they have made their last stop at the big elephant's tent and heard his trumpet blast for continued prosperity based on the old republican doctrine of "full opportunity for every man to make every honest dollar he can."

Two paragraphs in Colonel Roosevelt's long discourse before the senate investigating committee in Washington sum up the reasons for the collapse of his third term attempt. The first was this: "The man who bears false witness is guilty of as infamous conduct as the man who steals."

The aspirant for a third term is here reflected as in a looking glass. The second was this: "If I am elected again, I will administer the 'darkest Abyssinian treatment' to any corporation of the Standard Oil type that may need it."

That would mean Roosevelt reprisals on all big business enterprises which, in this campaign, have not subscribed liberally to the third term campaign fund, with Roosevelt, of course, to be the judge whether each corporation and combination of capital in the United States "needs it."

Some like the harvester trust would be exempt. No more brazen threat was ever made by a candidate for the presidency, driven desperate by the shrinking of his chances to extend his rule or ruin policy further in American politics.

The third term candidate is disposed of; the American voters have pushed him to one side. He knows it and his campaign managers, including the wily Perkins, know it, and word has gone out to retrench on expenses.

Wilson started out in his campaign by being thoroughly subservient to Bryan. "Do you know Wilson and Bryan are in constant communication?" said one eastern democrat to another. "Yes, they are now wearing the same cocked hat," was the rejoinder.

Bryan has been Wilson's political mentor from the beginning. When the list of democrats to compose the executive campaign committee was made up, the names were submitted to Bryan before being announced. One of the most commendable democrats in the west, but one who had been interested in the political future of another than Bryan four years ago, was stricken off by Bryan and others suggested also were given the gate by this political censor.

Democratic newspapers even now are publishing predictions that if Wilson is elected, Bryan will be the premier of his cabinet as secretary of state, the one position the Nebraska desires, and that McAdoo, Ryan's representative, will go as ambassador abroad, or sit in the Wilson cabinet as secretary of the treasury.

Now Wilson goes to Lincoln and enjoys the Sabbath by swapping experiences with Bryan and inhaling more advice about what not to say in his speeches for the next three weeks.

Wilson has to be careful, because he is on record for a number of embarrassing "breaks."

Don't Be Fuss About Eating

Your Stomach Will Digest Any Kind of Food When Given the Proper Assistance.

We are prone to fall into the error of singling out some article of food and soundly berating the fiend who first invented the dish. The habit grows with some people till almost all food is put on the blacklist. This is all wrong. What is required is a little assistance with those agencies upon which scientific students for many years have set their seal of approval because they have become absolute facts. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets for all stomach disorders are recognized; they have a fine record; they are rated reliable, dependable and worthy of confidence just as the president of a big bank puts his O. K. on a depositor's check. And so you can eat what you want, whatever you like, knowing well that should indigestion, sour risings, gas formations, fermentations or any other stomach distress arise, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in a few moments will put you right.

Coated tongue, bad breath, heartburn, belching, flatulency, bloating—all the symptoms of digestive troubles disappear quickly when these tablets are used. They are not a cure for anything but dyspepsia, and kindred complaints. But they have brought relief to more sufferers from digestive diseases than all the patent medicines and doctors' prescriptions put together. The stomach does the heaviest work of any of the bodily organs, yet it's the one we treat with the least regard. We eat too much of the wrong kind of food at any time. The patient stomach stands such treatment as long as it can and then it rebels. You get notice of the rebellion in the shape of the gases and pains caused by undigested, fermenting food.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold and recommended by all druggists at 50c a box.—Advertisement.
