HOG RECEIPTS INCREASING

South Omaha is Now Second Hog Packing Center of Country.

IT PASSES BY KANSAS CITY

Good Gain is Shown by Magic City, While Other Centers Have Been Scoring a Loss for the Last Year.

While records of the Chicago live stock and hog markets show little or no permanent increase South Omaha with the close of the present year goes forward steadily in the climb for the first place of the world's live stock market. South Omaha has completely dislodged Kansas City from its long continued occupancy of second place among the hog markets of the world. A loss of $50,000 in the receipts of Kansas City and an increase of $5,000 at South Omaha fixes the place of the local market as second only to Chicago.

During the present season to date South Omaha has slaughtered 1,470,000 hogs, as against a total of 1,430,000 for last year. This gain is of particular notice for the reason that while nearly every other market shows a falling off in the packing industry South Omaha increased its output. The decrease in the Chicago pork packing approximated 175,000 head to date.

At the Union stock yards the receipts of the hog market indicate that the year will reach a total of 3,000,000. Already more than 2,000,000 head have been received, and it is confidently expected that the receipts for the balance of the season will bring the present figure up by 50,000 additional porkers. Prices at the local market have been so close to those of Chicago that farmers have found it more profitable to pay less freight and conserve the shrinkage by sending their stuff to the local market. In the long run it is maintained that the shippers realize a bigger profit at the local market than if they sent their stuff over a long haul to Chicago.

CITY HAS NEARLY WON BIG CASE IN NEW YORK

The city of Omaha has practically won the suit brought by C. H. Verner & Co. to recover $14,000 damages, which they allege they sustained through misrepresentations of the city comptroller. The supreme court has released the attachment of $10,000 in the hands of the city's fiscal agents in New York, which Verner & Co. attached to secure the damages.

BURKE TALKS TO FEW PEOPLE

South Omaha Demos Have Hard Time Getting a Crowd for Speech.

TANNER ADMITS DREAM OF PIE

Gov. Burke Introduced by E. P. Smith, a Former Schoolmate—Tears Tariff to Pieces and Elects Wilson.

"There's something wrong with South Omaha democracy this year," as United States Senator G. M. Hitchcock noticed Thursday night, as John M. Tanner said, as "Jawn J. Gillin" could see and as the audience, drummed up to hear Governor John Burke of North Dakota, incoherently evidenced. To begin with the audience was such a dismal failure in number that Representative James Bulla advised Senator Hitchcock and those about him to adjourn the meeting to the Polish carnival grounds, where "we may get a crowd," said James. Jerry Howard and a few other faithful workers, however, saved the day by going out into the byways to gather in the usual brand of enthusiastic democrats.

Despite the beating of the Gillin tom-toms, the sending of special notices and the howlings of the democratic organ of publicity, last night's meeting in the High School auditorium was a frost. At most not more than 300 men, women and schoolboys were in the audience to hear the democratic Demosthenes from Dakota.

Teachers Did Not Come.

The overworked school teachers and tired children whose presence Gillin tried to force through Superintendent N. M. Graham did not come. The high school orchestra, whose service Gillin endeavored to impress through the same source, was also missing. In fact, on good authority it is said that Superintendent N. M. Graham, in a perfect scholarly and gentlemanly way, told the little bosslet to "go to" when he attempted to turn the school department into a part of the Gillin gang. Then, of those who did come last night, there were present a few members from each of the following political tribes: Democrats, Dahlmans, Gillinites, republicans, bull moosers and suffragettes.

J. J. in Middle Seat.

The show began when a young man with oily black hair sang a solo in a baritone voice. "Jawn J." in lonely mad-dog seats himself in the middle of the front row of seats on the platform. Soliman march of candidates, has been and others to places on the stage. Keynote speech seating Charles Otto Lobeck as chairman of the evening by "Jawn J." Charles Otto, in frock coat and statesmanlike pose, invites Mayor Dahman of Omaha to the stage. Mayor "Jim" apparently reluctant to appear conspicuous before such a doubtful audience, hesitates, but is finally persuaded. Soberly and blandly, and also condescendingly, Chairman Lobeck asks in a purring voice, "You, too, Mr. Howard, come up; aren't you with us?" "If I did," said Jerry, "you would not have much of a meeting."

Business of introducing Harry Fleharty to South Omaha, also C. J. Smyth, John Reagan, Albert Kapan, George Magney and F. J. Ford, South Omaha's loon keeper, whom Lobeck dubs the "pride of South Omaha." All candidates make formal bows in recognition of the introduction—that is all, except Doc Tanner, who gets away from the post with a good start, leaving Charles Otto pawing the air, so to speak.

Tanner Admits Pie.

Senator Tanner, using slang and billingsgate for the gang, and emperored rhetoric for the mentally weak, then launched into an attack upon A. C. Panoast, republican candidate for the state senate. He found fault with Panoast because that gentleman had recently shown that Tanner was to blame for the bad work of the city charter, in which the laboring men suffered while the favored contractors were benefited. Tanner's speech caused laughter when he admitted that he was in democratic politics for the pie that was in the game. He said other things, of course, but the burden of his soul escaped when he said he had been hoping and praying for the days of victory when democrats would march up to the pie counter and take away the last morsel from the well-billed republicans. Apparently warmed up by the memory of good things past and the hope of better things to come the speaker confessed that he even dreamed of the "pie." Then some one in the audience said something that sounded like "time" and Doc sat down amid the smiles of his compeers, who evidently considered that Tanner had said what they all thought but all could not say.

Governor Burke was then introduced by Ed P. Smith of Omaha, a former schoolmate of the North Dakota executive. The governor's speech was rattling in so far as holding the audience went. He belabored the records of President Taft and ex-President Roosevelt and exalted that of Governor Wilson. When speaking of the president and his stand on the tariff the crowd listened thoughtfully. When he attacked the bull moosers there was a distinct falling off of democratic applause. When the governor mentioned Roosevelt there was a weak attempt at applause which died out under the disapproving frowns of the "leaders." When the speaker berated the colonel, seven men, including August Miller, left the hall. But the governor kept right on until he had demolished the tariff, the republican party, Taft, Roosevelt and had safely elected Woodrow Wilson and admitted the hungry democrats to the pie counter in his speech. It was a great meeting, great—but somehow no one said anything about this "large and intelligent and enthusiastic audience."

CONTRACTOR JOHNSON WILL GET NEW BONDSMAN

F. O. Johnson, who secured the contract for raising the old county court house, will furnish a new bond for the faithful performance of contract, the original bond of the Globe Surety company of Kansas being about to be withdrawn.

The Globe company got cold feet after its bond was accepted, it having occurred to the concern that the risk would be too great. It is feared by that company that should an accident occur in the destruction of the old building the new structure would be damaged to a greater extent than the amount of the bond, which is for $5,000. In the meantime the work of tearing down the old court house is proceeding, as the Globe bond will hold good until a new one is submitted and accepted.

It was thought for a time that the commissioners would hold the Globe company to its contract, but owing to the great volume of business in the county attorney's office it was impossible to get an opinion as to whether the company could be held or not.
