Testimonial to Omaka Beauty. A photograph of Mrs. William Sears in, noted in Omaha for her good ooks as well as for her musical ability and social accomplishments, has received more than local attention through last week's issue of the National Bulletin of Photography published in Philadelphia. Photographers of different cities send their most beautiful works to the Bulletin and the choicest one are selected for publication.

Fort Omaha Perking Up. Fort Omaha is becoming quite gay, thanks to the inspiring influence of the major's wife, Mrs. Carl F. Hartmann. and to the fact that a number of new officers have arrived at the post. Mrs Hartmann has inaugurated an "at home" day at the signal corps post. Tuesday is the day selected and tea is served at the officers' quarters by their wives following the field parade in the afternoon. On Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings moving pictures will be shown in the post gymnasium. The bachelors are

The holidays will probably be especially gay as Mr. and Mrs. Perry Tiffany of Major and Mrs. Hartmann at that time Mrs. Tiffany, Mrs. Hartmann's sister, is a noted eastern beauty, and Mr. Tiffany is the grandson of Commodore Perry. Mr. and Mrs. Hartmann are giving a series of Saturday evening dinners at their quarters. Their guests last, evening

Two fashionable and youthful matrons of Omaha who went to New York with their husbands to attend the world's series of base ball games, decided that to $75 was too much to pay for a seat at a base ball game, when there were such wonderful theaters to attend and afternoon tess at the Plaza. There were the fascinating shops. One gown. There is also a new fad in hosiery.

Compare prices.

Omaha's Oldest Established

Perhaps you are under the imression that because this store aintains a high character in all its merchandise its prices are high. To remove this impression is our desire, and we only ask that you see other displays in other stores, get the prices, and then visit us, inspect our goods and get our prices. We know that we will gain through this com-

Compare quality.

We now are making a particularly fine showing of diamonds. Probably you have thought these too high priced; we want you to see them. Here are values priced as low as any in the country. You get the highest character dismonds if you wish; or you get slightly less inferior stones; but in every case the price is modest for the values.

A new three-piece suit ordered by a young woman was of black charmeuse satin. The lower part of the skirt was black brocaded velvet and the apper part of the skirt has draped paniers of the charmeuse. The bodice and coat are trimmed with the brocade with a bib effect of white lace.

There was a wonderful suit of brocaded velvet in the brown tones, the lower part of the skirt being entirely of fur, Russian sable being used. On the brocaded coat there were cuffs of the sable and a shoulder cape of the same fur.

At the Plana for afternoon tea the women were wearing gorgeous charmeuse coats. These are draped affairs with kimono sleeves.

Golden yellow seems to be the favorite shade for evening and afternoon sowns and one of the dressier three-piece suits was made of gold brocade and fur With these suits are worn large picture hats trimmed with plumes laid flat on

In Paris they have been wearing furs all summer or scarts and muffs of chiffon trimmed with fur. In New York they have been wearing them ever since early fall. The muffs are huge but very flat and the scarfs shaped like the shawls our grandmothers used to wear.

The last word, however, is in shoes and hosiery. Shoes are made of the same materials as the gowns, often the upper part of the shoe being of the brocaded part of the shoe being of the brocaded A. H. Fuller, material used for the trimming of the G. E. Haverstick,
