SCHOOL AND COLLEGE WORK

Mental and Physical Training Moving in Parallel Lines. HANDICAPS ON WOMEN SCHOLARS Some Obstacles to Their Advancement Pointed Out—Various Activities in Nearby Institutions. At chapel exercises at Bellevue college last Monday, the students were addressed by George L. Robinson of McCormick Theological seminary, Chicago. His topic, "The Bible in Men's Lives," was handled in a masterful way. The Philomathean Literary society held its formal banquet and initiation of new members Friday evening. The society has enrolled a large number of the new students in its ranks and promises to take the lead in literary lines the coming winter. Dr. Alexander Corkey was on the Hill for supper Wednesday evening and entertained the students with an after-supper talk in which he sustained his reputation as a master in the art of story telling. The grading on the new gymnasium is completed, also the excavations for the concrete foundation, which is to be put in the first of next week. The subject chosen for the Intercollegiate debate is "Resolved, That the Trusts Should Be Regulated, Rather Than Prevented." Doane, Cotner and Bellevue will debate this question the coming winter. In what is known as the triangular debate, Cotner was victorious last year, defeating both Bellevue and Doane.

STATE NORMAL, WAYNE.

Entertainments and Visitors Diversify School Work. William Ritchie, formerly county superintendent of Cheyenne county, was a recent visitor. Miss Viola Marshall of Minneapolis, Minn., territorial secretary of the Young Women's Christian association, was the guest of the local association the first of the week and addressed the young women of the school at one of their devotional meetings. During the last week the school has had the privilege of listening to a number of speakers who are in attendance at the Baptist state convention in Wayne. Among those who addressed the students at convention are Dr. W. E. Chalmers of Philadelphia and Dr. Stackhouse of New York City. Six students and two members of the faculty left Friday evening for Vermillion, S. D., to represent the Wayne State Normal school in the conference of the north central field committee of the Young Women's Christian association, which meets at South Dakota university Friday and Saturday. This school will be represented by Hazel P. Rand, Gertrude Buetow, Edna Chambers, Kate Adams, Mary Trevett, Lillian Brachman, students, and Miss Olive M. McBeth and Miss Lillian M. Jewell, members of the faculty. Prof. J. T. House, head of the English department, returned from the University of Chicago Monday, where he took the final examination and received the degree of doctor of philosophy. For three years preceding his coming to Wayne Prof. House was a student and assistant in the department of sociology in the Chicago university and he spent there the last two summers in work leading to his doctor's degree. Prof. House is receiving the congratulatory friends because of the honor conferred upon him by this great university. The Normal school was pleased on Friday morning to have as its guests the students and faculty of the Wayne High school. A large delegation from the city schools marched in a body to the Normal chapel and gave a very interesting literary and musical program. Superintendent J. H. Kemp presided and Mrs. Mattie A. Phillips conducted the devotional exercises. The program consisted of a short address by Superintendent Kemp, vocal solo by Margery Kohl, essay by Everett Raymond, instrumental duet by Hayes Main and Ralph Bohner, reading by Lna Hughes and a song by the high school quartet.

SERMON HEARD BY OLD FOLKS

Talk is Given Especially for Them by Dietz Memorial Pastor. FEAR OF LORD BEGINS LIFE Minister Exhorts His Hearers to Number Their Days, that They Might Apply Their Hearts to Wisdom. "How to grow old gracefully" was explained by Rev. C. N. Dawson, pastor of the Dietz Memorial church, in a heart-to-heart appeal to dozens of old people Sunday morning; aged persons who had come from all parts of the city, in autos, buggies, on foot and assisted by friends, to hear the program given at this church in honor of the "old folks." "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom," was Rev. Mr. Dawson's text, and in part he said: "Such is the brevity of human life that few reach the age of three score years and ten. It is said that the good die young, but there is nothing in right living to shorten life. Sin kills. "Fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. The text suggests heart application to life's work. "I owe much to old people, and I do not regret any attentions I have bestowed upon the aged. Youth should honor age. "Grow Old Gracefully. Referring to his statement that aged persons should grow old gracefully, Mr. Dawson continued: "Men and women should grow old gracefully. Don't be ashamed of your age. I have known men and women not over 50 to be ashamed to tell their age. "To grow old gracefully live life in the present. Associate with young people. Read current literature. Do not go to bed too soon. "Socrates learned to play upon musical instruments when a very old man. Cato began to learn the Greek language at 80 years. Petrarck commenced the study of Latin between 70 and 80. "Do not worry. Worry kills more men and women than work. There is no sadder sight than an old man trying to shake himself off. One of the grandest sights in this world is to see an aged person grown old sweetly, like ripened fruit that falls easily from the boughs. As this world closes its doors heaven's doors are opened. "Samuel Burns was to have recalled some early experiences, and reminiscences were to have been given by other old folks, but they preferred to listen to the pastor rather than try to talk. Rev. D. C. John led the congregation in prayer, the choir sang, and Rev. C. Q. A. Flaharty pronounced the benediction.

PA ROURKE IS OPTIMISTIC

Says He Has Deals Which Will Give Omaha a Great Team. MINOR LEAGUES TO MEET HERE Owner of the Omaha Team Says He Has Plans Well Laid to Bring All the Magnates to Omaha. Pa Rourke is in a particularly happy frame of mind these days. Why? Because he is just back from a ten days' sojourn with his old sidekick, Charlie Comiskey, in Chicago, and the two after a long heart-to-heart confab came to an understanding about next year's doings, that can mean nothing but good for each party. Pa is in line for many improvements in his regime next year, both as to players and the manner of conducting the season. Already he has all but completed several deals, that will open the eyes of the local fans, when the spring zephyrs start melting the ice over the home plate. "I have the nucleus for the fastest and cleverest team that I have ever gotten together," declared Rourke. "I expect if my plans materialize, to surpass all records and give Omaha the best season of high class base ball in the history of the city. "The close of a season has never left me with as large an amount of high class material on hand as has the present one, and with the addition of a couple of good pitchers, with whatever talent the spring brings forth, I will be in a position to start the 1913 season as I have never been able to start before. Every player on my staff belongs outright to me, a statement which I doubt few minor league club owners can truthfully make, and I expect this fact alone to help me as much as any other in turning out a 1913 pennant winner. The team of last season was as good as any in the league, despite the fact that we finished third, but if we had drawn a schedule like the Denver club I believe there would have been no catching us. I am not kidding, mind you, because our schedule in 1911 was fully as favorable for us as was the Denver club's for them this year. "Training? Well it now looks like Oklahoma City for next spring, as the inducements held out for us to go there are the best that have so far been presented to me. They would like to have us come back to Joplin, but the weather we encountered in that place last spring, has almost convinced me that it would be taking too big a chance to return there next season. I want to get the team in as near midseason form as possible in the spring, and I have been assured that there is no better spot within a reasonable distance, to obtain such results, than Oklahoma City. "It is a pretty safe bet the annual meeting of the Minor Leagues of America comes to Omaha. I have my wires well laid, have the backing and support of some of the strongest and best known base ball men in the country, and feel confident that Omaha will get the meeting. "When will it be? Well, that's hard to tell, but soon after our Western league meeting, which will be held about November 14, and don't forget it, this meeting will put Omaha on the base ball map for fair. "The minor leagues are cutting a great figure in base ball affairs this fall, and will cut a greater one this winter. "The Western league schedule will all be thoroughly thrashed out at the coming November meeting, and while I have my own deep-seated ideas, I would rather not be quoted."

Baldness a Manly, Christian Virtue

Rev. Mr. Higbee preaching at the North Presbyterian church, Twenty-fourth and Wirt streets, yesterday morning took for his text Acts 4:13. "When they saw the boldness of these men they marveled and said, 'They have been with Jesus.' "It almost seems irreverent to speak of baldness as a characteristic of Christ," said Rev. Mr. Higbee. There was something about Christ, whether you choose to call it boldness or not, which gave courage, initiative, and boldness to his associates. Christ's truest followers have ever been of an aggressive spirit. It was entire confidence in the unique and masterful personality of their leader which gave them this spirit. They felt Him take over to himself as if by magic their own affections and wills. They saw others who like themselves had been followers of other teachers; absorbed in daily task like those which had engaged them; held by habits of thought and work and pleasure, leaving all and following the lowly Nazarene. They came to believe that what their leader possessed was more than the religion of the Jew more than the learning of the Greek and more than the power of the Roman. A holy compulsion was upon them to speak the words which they had heard Him speak. They told the deeds which they had seen in Him. They declared there was no name as great as Jesus' name; no salvation in any other. When they were called in question for their words, they said: "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." When called to account for their deeds of healing, these, they said, were done in the name of the crucified Jesus. "By Him doth this man stand here before you whole." And in perfect keeping with all this, though in different spirit, the people said: "These men have been with Jesus and that is why they are so bold to speak and work." These bold apostles had, indeed, been with Jesus; with the Jesus who at 12 years of age dared to speak to the teachers of Israel; who as a youthful Galilean peasant had prophesied the complete destruction of the temple which they loved; claimed that He himself was the fulfillment of the law in which the pious found rich satisfaction and believed it to be the ultimate way of holiness. Surely they could get only boldness from Him who dared to call the outwardly righteous, whitened sepulchres and their generation a generation of vipers. It requires more boldness often to call men away from a wrong use of the good than from other forms of baseness and evil. This Jesus did, and did it not for those of His day only, but for those of all days.

DOANE COLLEGE.

Musical Activities, Foot Ball Regain and Yells. Music and expression students gave a recital Tuesday evening at 4:30 in the chapel. It was well attended and enjoyed by all. Hereafter these will be given each month. Miss Parker, of the expression department, assisted by Prof. Dick, on the violin, gave a recital at Friday evening. She has several other recital dates booked in towns near Crete and will do much for Doane in advertising her department. The College Choral club and band meet each week under the direction of Prof. Dick, and some good work is being done. Concerts will be given by both organizations during the year. After the foot ball team had left for Yankton, Thursday, a mass meeting of the students was held in the chapel for the purpose of practicing the songs and yells and deciding upon the kind of hats to get to wear at the games this year. It was decided to get a regular rah-rah hat with Doane across the front, and in orange letters. Practically all the students will get these and will wear them.

EMERSON COMPARED WITH THE PROPHET ELIJAH

Rev. J. T. Jones, pastor of the First Congregational church of Council Bluffs, addressed the Omaha Philosophical society Sunday afternoon on "Emerson—His Teaching and Influence." One of the striking illustrations used by the speaker was a comparison of Emerson with Elijah the prophet. "Both," he said, "stood upon solid ground, but their heads towered above the clouds." "Emerson was pre-eminently a prophet of protest. He protested against slavery of the intellect and against slavery of the soul, as well as against slavery of the negro of his day." "Emerson," he said, "inspires us by his example as well as by his words. He took a deep and abiding interest in all things concerning the life of humanity. If he at times seems inconsistent, it is because he at all times spoke what he thought to be true, and that which was true yesterday is not recognized as truth today."

SAND HILLS PRODUCING GREAT WEALTH IN CROPS

B. J. Hamilton of this city has returned from the sand hills of Nebraska, where he has agricultural interests, and he has a fund of interesting statistics about the resources of that part of the country. He explains that the irrigated valleys produce never-failing crops of hay, especially alfalfa, that would be a credit to land worth $100 an acre. Potatoes, pumpkins and tomatoes that almost break the ground with their weight are grown and cattle, sheep and hogs thrive there. Mr. Hamilton describes the sand hills of Nebraska as the garden spot of the country. Key to the Situation—Bee Advertising.

CHANCE DOES NOT ANSWER DESCRIPTION OF MANAGER

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Frank Chance, manager of the Chicago Cubs for seven years, will not be at the head of the team next year if President C. W. Murphy stands by a statement he made today. Murphy said he would have as leader next year the youngest playing manager in the league and a man who will live and vote in Chicago. But he would not name him. Chance is older than some of the managers, probably will not play next year and says he will not live in Chicago throughout the year under any consideration on account of his California interests.
