Food Poisoning

By ELBERT HUBBARD.

Very few deaths are natural. Men die because a part gives out, and, unlike an Oliver plow or a McCormick reaper, you can't replace the parts. The next best thing, when you have a hot-box or get short-circuited is to send for the surgeon; and he cuts into you, removes the offender, and you go through life with one cylinder, somewhat proud of it, mentioning the fact to neighbors and marveling that you can run at all with one kidney and no appendix.

Health means that the friendly germs are fighting for you, and disease means that the germs of dissolution and death are in the majority. Chemicals that set up an explosion in the internal economy were discovered by Hippocrates 50 years before Christ. It was looked upon and has been all down the centuries, as a wonderful thing that you could take a drug and bring about a certain result in a short time. But, there was one thing the world has known until very recent times, and that is that every drug has not only a direct but a reactionary effect. Action and reaction are equal.

The use of drugs that bring about quick action are always followed by periods of inaction and torpor. Then, after a time, the individual has to take more medicine. He is educating his body, and he is wrongly educating it, and in course of time he becomes a victim of the drug habit—which is as bad as to be a victim of the drink habit. And, in fact, it is very much like it, save that its symptoms are somewhat veiled, but it is just as deadly in its career.

Dr. J. H. Tilden, one of the great moderns, says that in all of his career he has never known a case of appendicitis excepting with individuals who were addicted to the drug habit. Appendicitis follows torpidity, and is the natural result of impaction, starting inflammation in a small but very useful organ. The vermiform appendix becomes fevered, then inflamed, and fashionable surgery—not being able to cure the complaint—simply cuts the organ out.

Every individual should discover for himself the foods that agree with him and stick to them. He will also properly discover the foods that disagree with him, and these he should absolutely forego.

How Moose Jaw Got Its Name. Moose Jaw is a strange name for a city, and it may be of interest to know how such a name was given. Some fifty years ago, so the story goes, a pioneer with his team of oxen and "prairie schooner," while passing along the banks of the river, was obliged to camp at this point, in Saskatchewan, on account of an accident to his cart, as a spoke had fallen out during the day and the wheel was falling apart. He looked around for something to insert for a temporary brace for the wheel, while his wife busied herself with the evening meal. The pioneer's child, while romping around, found the jawbone of a moose, which she held up to her father, who by this time almost despaired of finding something with which to mend his wagon, and was delighted to find that the jawbone exactly fitted the place of the missing spoke. The Indians thereafter named this part of the river "The Place Where the White Man Found the Moose Jaw." This accounts for the town's unforgettable name.—Manitoba Free Press.

ROMANCE IN YOUTH, COLD CASH LATER

MRS. WILLIAM BULOW.

Young society matron, who says the girl of 18 longs for romance, while a girl who has reached her 28 is guided by thoughts of the value of an income more than by sentiment.

By MARGARET HUBBARD AYER.

What is the ideal proposal? Many readers of this paper have sent in their ideas upon this interesting subject.

So, armed with one of these, from a young man who says that the "present-day" girl will not encourage the right kind of fellow, or consider his proposal of marriage a satisfactory one, I looked up Mrs. William Bulow, the pretty young society matron, who has rather individual views upon man in general, and love-making in particular. Here is the letter which I submitted to her:

"Dear Madam: The majority of the present-day girls do not encourage the right kind of fellow in the game of matrimony. But 'right kind' is a relative term and surely everybody is the 'right kind' in his or her estimation. My idea of the 'right kind' of fellow (or girl, for that matter) is the one who entirely asks the present-day mania for 'showing off' for affect.

"Love, real love, can work wonders, and surely we'll all agree that the man who is surrounded by the atmosphere of a happy home life can go out in the world and fight his way better equipped than his friend who married for convenience, who is sora on himself and his bachelor friends, and lives a selfish, meaningless life.

"Love in a cottage is not so much of a fallacy as it is out of date; like homemade bread that mother used to bake, it has gone out of style. As I've said, the modest, serious young fellow is not popular with the majority of girls. He is a cheap 'gink' and 'piker,' to use the slang expressions.

"The girls want sports and good lively fellows, and they generally get them, too. Who is to blame or what? It's too big a question for me. A. C. G.

"Mrs. Bulow read the letter over very carefully, and then looking up in her bright, quick way, said: "I think the young man is very sore; evidently he is of the good, plodding kind, the kind that makes the best American husband, if a girl has sense enough to see an embryo success in the young man whose social attainments are not brilliant.
