The death of Vice President James

Schoolcraft Sherman creates profound regret throughout the country Mr. Sherman made no pretensions to brilliancy in oratory nor genius in statesmanship, but he was one of those substantial, conscientious, energetic and level-headed leaders de veloped in our public life thoroughly typical of American citizenship. In every capacity in which he was tried he showed himself intensely devoted to his duty as he saw it, and in addition possessed personal traits that cemented the affection of those who knew him. Perhaps strongest among these traits was unwavering loyalty to friends and innate appreciation of friendship. A staunch partisan, ingrained with republicanism, he yet always schuyler. accorded his opponent the same rights he claimed for himself. Ingratitude to individuals, or to a political party, was listed by him personal liking, combined with the cutspoken courage of his convictions, that gave Mr. Sherman his position of leadership among men.

But ere it reached this stage was a fight to the finish by the buil of the game. Mr. Bryan in his joint demoosers of this state that no Taft elec- bate with Senator Thurston in Omaha tors should appear on the bailet, but said that the result of the election was attuight, and the cry goes up that since that cheapness is no benefit to us if we don't have the price, then he said it was a trick the republicans played on the people twenty-three years before that that had caused the decline in values.

The stock market is at this time hedging until they can know what they must figure on in their transactions. So all we will have to do to repeat the dose is to elect at the time Mr. Wilson with a congress of free traders and enough state legislatures that have senators to elect to give them the control, and we will have the very same effects as before, and, as prices begin to decline, we will have the same old dodge that it was caused by something the republicans had done years
