Date is Set for the Hearing of Douglas County Contests

Dates have been set for the taking of deposition in the contest cases of the Douglas county delegation to the state legislature. The evidence is to be taken December 4 in the senatorial contest before Notary Public George H. Mertens. On the same date the hearing of the case of the members elected to the lower house is to come up before Notary Public West. The case against Grossman, the one, democrat whose seat is being contested, is to be heard December 6. The law provides for $100 for each man whose seat is contested to provide himself with an attorney. This will mean $1,500 furnished the republican delegation by the state, with which to employ attorneys to handle their case. The delegation feels that it can secure competent attorneys for this amount. Certificates of election have been issued to the republican delegation by the county clerk.

Ben Welch Makes Possible a Big Feed for Institute Kids

A fund of $43.72 was raised in a remarkably short time for the Thanksgiving dinner of the children at the Child Saving Institute yesterday by Ben Welch by selling fruit at the corner of Sixteenth and Farnam streets. Welch sent the money to Rome Miller, who is president of the Child Saving Institute. Welch with a helper wheeled a small cart made of a grocery box to the corner of Sixteenth and Farnam streets and at once began to cry his wares. He sold apples, oranges and bananas, auctioneering them off in a lusty voice and constantly calling attention to the fact that the fund was to be raised for the Thanksgiving dinner of the children of the institute. People bought right and left and in a short time had exhausted his supply.

Hotel Men See No Cause for Raise in the Price of Milk

Speaking of the proposed raise in the price of milk December 1 Rome Miller, proprietor of the Hotel Rome, said: "I am a large consumer of milk and cream, but not a producer. Therefore I am not in a position to know whether the dairy-men would be justified in raising the price or not. But I certainly should like to see them improve and raise the quality of their product."

Richard Kitchen, manager of the Paxton hotel, said: "I certainly hope they will not raise the price of milk. Nearly everything we have to buy in the hotel business has risen, and we are charging no more for meals. I can see no reason, judging from figures on feed, why the price of milk should be raised. It seems that it is just a part of the general fever for raising prices."

PERSONAL PARAGRAPH

Mr. and Mrs. Sam North have gone to Cedar Rapids, Ia., to spend Thanksgiving with Mrs. North's sister.

"THE THANKSGIVING RAG"

HOW THEY SING IT HERE AND IN THE BALKANS

BY HANK.

Gobble, gobble, gobble, watch the feathers fly;
Hobble, hobble, hobble, run and catch him, Si;
Bustle, bustle, bustle, don't you take all day;
Hustle, hustle, hustle, or he'll get away;
Sock 'im, sock 'im, sock 'im on his long, lean neck;
Knock 'im, knock 'im, knock 'im on the ground by heck!

Make him do the Turkey Trot;
Give him everything you've got;
Make him senseless on the spot;
Serve him brown and piping hot.
That's the Thanksgiving Rag (that's the Thanksgiving Rag).
That's the Thanksgiving Rag.
Shoot 'im, shoot 'im, shoot 'im, come and join the fun;

Hoot 'im, hoot 'im, hoot 'im, watch the old Turk run;
Catch 'im, catch 'im, catch 'im, make his black eyes blink;
Snatch 'im, snatch 'im, snatch 'im, with the rinky-dink;
Slash 'im, slash 'im, slash 'im, from his head to heels;
Smash 'im, smash 'im, smash 'im, so he'll stand to meals;
Make him do the Turkey Trot;
Make the bullets good and hot;
Get into his money pot;
Grab off everything he's got.
That's the Serbian and Bulgarian and the Grecian Rag.

GREEK HAS A BRAIN STORM

He Narrates Mysterious Yarn of Being Pursued by Murderers.

BLOODY DREAMS DISTURB HIM

John Kolliteris Begins to See Things When He is About to Start for the Balkans to Take Up Arms Against Turks.

Hounded by three unknown men until his nerves were shattered and his brain tottered on the verge of insanity, John Kolliteris, a Grand Island Greek, bound to join his countrymen in the Balkan war, has appealed to Sheriff McShane for protection from the trio that he fears will do him to death.

But for his possession of a piece of black chalk, the charm of a secret Greek order of which he is a member, Kolliteris believes his pursuers would have ended his life before this.

Kolliteris could not tell where the men might be found; no arrests could be made; the best the sheriff could do for him was to advise that he keep himself on main traveled streets and in public places, where no attempt to harm him successfully can be made.

Puts House in Order.

The Greek formerly was employed in the Union Pacific shops at Grand Island. Two weeks ago he gave up his position to join the Greek army. Realizing the dangers he would face, he made his will and "put his house in order." He visited his uncle in Grand Island, the only other member of the Kolliteris family in America, for assistance in planning the disposition of the small property that would be left in case he should meet death.

Returning to his room that night, according to his story, he was set upon by three men, whom he never before had seen. They had accosted themselves beneath his bed and leaped upon him when he opened his door.

Kolliteris wrested himself free, escaped from the room, slammed the door behind him and fled. He procured a revolver and returned to his room, but the three men were gone.

May Be Seeking Revenge.

Who his pursuers were, or of what the motive of their attack Kolliteris did not know then and says he does not know now. It may be they have been offended by some member of the secret order to which he belongs and seek to avenge the wrong.

Kolliteris slept uneasily that night. Once or twice in his troubled slumber he thought his pursuers returned. Awakening, he caught his gun and held it ready for instant use. Making a light he searched the room. No one was there. But in the morning, three drops of blood appeared on the floor beside his bed. Whether it was spilled by one of the three during his struggle with them the night before he does not know. Seeking relief in prayer, Kolliteris went to the Greek Catholic church. There on the doorstep lay a cloth torn into three pieces. The Greek says he believes this was an omen of evil about to befall him.

Half a dozen times since these events, Kolliteris says, he has seen one or more of the pursuers watching him from a distance. He believes they rode to Omaha on the same train that bore him here. One of them he saw in the courthouse as he was climbing the stairway to the sheriff's office, he said, but when he and the sheriff went about the building the man could not be found.

ENGLISH'S SAFETY RAZOR NOT SO SAFE AFTER ALL

As a result of an engagement with a safety razor blade, in which he came out second best, County Attorney James P. English is unable to be in his office. Mr. English was visiting his son in Kansas City over Sunday. While he was attempting the blade on that day, the mechanism went wrong, the blade was thrown back and a finger tendon of the county attorney's left hand was severed. Mr. English was operated upon Monday night. He has returned, but his physician ordered him not to leave his home for a few days.
