GRAIN AND PRODUCE MARKET

Foreign Demand Keeps Up the Price of Wheat Locally.

CORN MOVEMENT IS HEAVY

Marketing of Oats Has Been Slow Because of the Car Shortage and Because Farmers Are Selling Their Corn.

OMAHA, Dec. 23, 1912. A demand for wheat necessary in order to keep the price of wheat from breaking into low levels. When the market opened on Saturday sentiment was rather bearish, but the bears lacked a leader and only a moderate price loss for wheat was seen. On the other hand, spots of late wheat and the selling was accomplished through movement of brokers, showing no doubt that big holders in the trade were anxious to dispose of at least a part of their crop. The market was rather quiet in the search for material to better their condition. They have told of flour sales that were never made and they have also told of a reduction in the surplus of Argentina as well as a reduction in the Canadian wheat crop, all of which were made out of whole cloth. A drowning man will grab at a straw or, in fact, anything that may seem to float in the hope of getting terra firma.

The big holders of cash wheat throughout the country will see that they carry the May option at Chicago, may at the present be compared with a drowning man. There is no telling, however, what will be the result of the holders of wheat out of what some call a "preliminary" sale. It is possible that a complete reversal of the market conditions.

Melady, the crop expert, who has been observing the South American wheat fields for the last two months, returned to Chicago on Saturday. His report, "The Argentina crop is being harvested and threshed under very favorable conditions. Losses are estimated at a change to unfavorable weather and losses in quality as well as quantity."

Conditions surrounding the corn market point to an abnormal crop. The crop is in a position to take care of all the grain offered. Many reports have been received from the field that the crop is in a position to take care of all the grain offered. Many reports have been received from the field that the crop is in a position to take care of all the grain offered.
