Everywhere the interest in Indian music as thematic material of American music is increasing. Arthur Farwell, the well-known composer and critic, recently gave a lecture on "Indian Songs and Their Belation to American Music," in which he said that compositions written upon these themes should be listened to as any other modern music, and not be considered.

It Happened in the Ungraded Room

Episode of the Ring That John Found

NO GOTTA DE BUNG

HE bell rang summoning the children from recess. As the line of the ungraded room filed in, the Austrian boy, John, handed the teacher a small gold ring, saying: "I find him."

The teacher smiled and walked into the kindergarten room. No child there claimed the ring. The innovations will appear, and who would no more think of discussing and first grade children likewise disclaimed the jewel.

This the teacher explained to her Austrian pupil and told him he might keep it for himself.

"No fit me," he said, "give Sidonie." Sidonie was the latest arrival from Italy. She yielded herself very slowly to the language of the new world. She was a very attractive child on the days when her mother arose

She was likewise very excitable.

The teacher called Sidonie forward and put the ring on her finger. Sidonie made an elaborate bow and kissed the teacher's hand to show her-gratitude for the gift.

At dismissal time the teacher charged Sidonie to take care of her ring and sent the children home.

About a half hour later came a tiny tot from the kindergarten to tell that 'twas her ring which had room. Most of the pupils sympathized with Sidonie been lost and she had just noticed hers was lost. The teacher regretted the incident deeply. If Sidonie brought the ring back the next day the kindergarten

And so the night passed and it was morning of the second day. For a wonder Sidonie arrived early. The teacher motioned her to bring the ring. Sidonie's face took on a lengthy look. She shook her head and spread out her hands.

Mike, the ever ready, was requested to hold converse with Sidonie and discover the whereabouts of the ring. According to Sidonie's story she had removed the ring from her finger, soon after the teacher had put it there. She had laid it on a corner of her desk and Rosie, another Italian girl, had taken it.

The case rested awaiting Rosle's arrival. Presently in she came. Her cheeks were pink and her eyes danced. Rosie was the personification of a pleasant beginning of the day. Sidonie met her and spoke a few words in Italian. All the smiles and dimples left Rosle's face. Her eyes darkened; her fists clenched and then; oh, then, broke her shrill voice on the moment before peaceful air of the ungraded room. Rosie yelled; she shricked; she danced about as though on a hot griddle. So fast and furiously did she talk now in Italian, now in broken English, that even Mike fled in dismay; Sidonie cowered down in her seat and > Rosie called down the wrath of heaven upon her who would accuse her of theft. She hurled curses upon Sidonie, and all her generation. At least thus did the teacher construe Rosie's gesticulations. She beat her breast and called heaven to witness as to the number of rings her mother "have at home ina de trunk."

But Sidonie only wept and stuck to her original story. By this time there was almost a riot in the and nothing could shake Sidonie from her persistence that Rosie had taken the ring.

The teacher approached Rosie and asked Rosie is she had taken the ring. Here followed such an exhibition of Italian passion that the teacher of the ungraded room felt her wrath kindle. Though Italian was not one of the teacher's accomplishments, she was no mean actress, and Rosle was soon reduced to a weeping pulp.

'No a wanta make a de teach' sick; me sorry; Sidone no give ring," apologized Rosie. But Sidonie persisted and the ring was lost

This Should Keep The Baby Healthy

When it is ill don't become alarmed but give this fine laxative

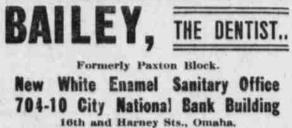

It is often difficult to tell just what is the matter with a crying, peevish baby or child in words, but as a general rule the mother will find that there is a tendency to constipation, which has brought on a headache or nervousness. The little one has no pain, but feels "out of sorts." The first thing to try is a family remedy containing good but mild laxative properties, and many mothers will say that their choice would be Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Thousands of mothers the prophesiles of a few years afto when per themer were looked upon to furnable a working basis for future American music.
