GEN. DODGE IS REMINISCENT

Tells of Labors of Building Union Pacific Road.
RECOUNTS INDIAN BATTLES
 Secures Leave of Absence from His Army Duties to Survey the First Railroad Across the State of Iowa.
 In interesting narrative style, General Grenville M. Dodge gave the history of the upbuilding of the Union Pacific and its connection with Omaha, before an unusually large crowd at the Commercial club yesterday noon. Nearly fifty Omaha and Council Bluffs pioneers attended the dinner, most of whom sat at the speaker's table. Edson Rich, attorney for the Union Pacific, acted as chairman of the meeting and introduced the speaker with bits of history from books of the company.
 As given by General Dodge the history of the Union Pacific railroad is a romance. He told of personal experiences and conversations with Abraham Lincoln, General Sherman, General Grant and other prominent personages of Civil War time regarding the work of building the road. It was a dream of his youth and he lived to see the completion of the Central Pacific and Union Pacific, May 10, 1869, making the cross continent route and the fixing of the terminals which made Omaha.
 He told of how he had made the first survey for the road across Iowa, how he had secured a leave of absence from army duties at Fort Leavenworth tendered by President Lincoln that he might come to Omaha and continue his railroad building. He told of the fights he had with Indians and internal troubles in the railroad company organization and gave much credit to those who helped start the building of the road, who, he said, made no money out of it.
Curtis Names Road.
 Colonel S. S. Curtis, in 1836, gave the name, Union Pacific, to the road while he was in congress. It formerly had been known as the Pacific road.
 In 1859 General Dodge had a conversation with Abraham Lincoln at the Pacific House hotel in Council Bluffs regarding the survey of the road. Lincoln then was attorney for the Rock Island at Springfield, Ill., said the speaker. Later, when he was president, General Dodge visited him at Washington when the question of the initial point of the road was under discussion. Several towns in this neighborhood wanted the initial point, but after General Dodge, in pointing out original plans and surveys to the president, declared Omaha to be the logical place, legislation followed which brought about that result.
 The head of the railroad company was a second mortgage, General Dodge said, and it was President Lincoln's desire to make it a first mortgage bond.
Lincoln Favors Road.
 "In talking to President Lincoln," he said, "I suggested that the government should build the road, but he said the government had its hands full with the civil war. A law passed in 1864 made it possible to raise money to continue the road building."
 General Dodge said it was through money furnished by Oliver and Oakes Ames that made the Union Pacific possible. Telling of personal experiences with General Sherman, the speaker said he never knew the general to ask credit for but one thing, and that was his helping in the building of the Union Pacific railroad.

 As General Dodge told his story, illustrating it with letters and telegrams he had sent and received, the building of the Union Pacific railway was a fight from beginning to end, and those who heard him could not but admire the aggressiveness of General Dodge, which plainly could be seen was the real factor in the establishment of that railroad.
Mohler Absent.
 A. L. Mohler, president of the Union Pacific, was unable to return to Omaha in time to attend the dinner given General Grenville M. Dodge at the Commercial club yesterday. He sent this telegram of regret from New York:
 "I find now that it will be impossible for me to attend the luncheon given to General G. M. Dodge, January 2. I personally regret an enforced absence. General Dodge is one of the few living men who took away from the buffalo, the Indian, the jack rabbit, the coyote and the wolf the country west of the Missouri river which made possible its present prosperity. It can safely be assumed that the large majority of the population of Nebraska and Wyoming have made their residence in those states since General Dodge made it attractive with his transportation line. In this day and age we too soon forget our obligation to others for our prosperity."

PROTEST TAX FOR STREET

Irate Twenty-Eighth Street Property Owners Storm Council.
ARE SENT TO SEE HOWELL
 Howell Tells Them the Council is at Fault—Meet With the Water Board at an Afternoon Session.

Twenty-five irate property owners on Twenty-eighth avenue from Bristol to Binney and from Fowler to Fort came charging down on the city council sitting as a board of estimates and with much shaking of fists and threats of vengeance if their assessments for opening the avenue was permitted to stand, forced the commissioners to postpone approval of the assessment for a month.
 Mrs. J. W. Evans was leader of the twenty-five and her lieutenants were M. O. Cunningham, an attorney, and John G. Willis, a real estate dealer and a Twenty-eighth avenue land owner.
 During the discussion with the council it developed that the Twenty-eighth avenue residents were very bitter toward the city commissioners for opening their street and granting the Water board authority to lay the Florence water main there instead of along the Twenty-seventh street route.
 Councilman McGovern wanted to explain for the commission. He said the main was a public necessity and the Water board ought to pay a part of the expenses of the opening of the street. This gave Mrs. Evans an idea.
 "Let's see Mr. Howell. All in favor of seeing Howell hold up their right hands."
 They all held up their hands and as they marched to the water commissioner's office the councilmen breathed a sigh of relief.
 Howell's private office was soon jammed with the protestors. They told him their assessment, $12,735.52 was entirely too high and the Water board ought to pay some of it.
 Howell reciprocated with the city council by saying it was the council's fault altogether and the property owners were right to blame the city commission. He said the Water board had spent $18,000 more than they had originally planned because McGovern insisted that the council compel the Water board to lay the main on the Twenty-eighth avenue route.
 Cunningham suggested that since the Water board had advanced the council the money to open the street the board could not recover this money, and the resident were now being taxed for something they did not owe, as it had been paid.
 Howell invited the property owners to appear before the Water board in the afternoon and Mrs. Evans asked for a vote. They all voted to attend and ask the Water board for relief.

FIREMAN SAVES LITTLE CHILD

William Reese Enters Burning Cottage and Brings Out Babe.
MOTHER GOES INTO HYSTERICS
 Could Not Tell About Babe on Second Floor, but Fireman Hears Cries and Puts Ladder Up Against House.
 Battling dense volumes of smoke and flames in a little cottage at Thirtieth and Mason streets yesterday morning, William Reese, fireman on truck No. 7, entered the hero class when he saved the 3-month-old baby of Andrew Poma from certain death by fire.
 The fire broke out about 8 o'clock, while the mother was preparing breakfast. Flames burst over the entire room when a gasoline stove exploded. Mrs. Poma ran from the house abash and rolled about the grass, extinguishing the fire in her clothes. Thinking of her baby on the second floor the mother attempted to go back and save her little one, but the flames drove her back. She became hysterical, and when the fire department arrived could not give the firemen any information. Time after time she tried to break into the little home which was a mass of flames, but every time she was beaten back.
Rushed In Through Flames.
 William Reese, one of the firemen who answered the fire call was putting up a ladder alongside of the house when he heard the screams and cries of a baby's voice. Quickly donning his heavy coat he rushed into the front door and through flames and smoke. For several minutes his companions waited for his return, but the veteran fireman failed to make his appearance. Just as his fellow fireman had begun to believe he had perished in the flames, Reese appeared at a window in the second floor with the baby in his arms. A ladder was soon run up to the window and baby and fireman descended to safety. The baby with a little scream of joy was placed in its mother's arms, who cuddled the little fellow and ran to a neighbor's house. The little cottage was burned to the ground. Reese has been with the fire department for a number of years, and prior to entering the service was a sailor. He is considered one of the best firemen in the department and is recognized as a fearless and brave man.

INTENSE ITCHING AND BURNING

Scratching Made Sores. Could Not Sleep. Used Two Cakes of Cuticura Soap and Two Boxes of Cuticura Ointment. Now Rid of Trouble.
 R. F. D. No. 2, Tawas City, Mich.—"My skin trouble was brought on when I was in the army, by fever and ague. It came on my body in a form of dead skin, then the itching and burning were intense, and I would scratch and make sores. One year ago this winter I was so bad I could not sleep, had to get out of bed every hour of the night, build a fire, heat water and take a bath before I could get any rest.
 I washed with hot water, washed off the dead skin, then put on the Cuticura Soap, dried it with a towel and then put on the Cuticura Ointment. I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and I was rid of the trouble and now I can sleep and rest." (Signed) E. L. Price, June 14, 1912.
 Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczema and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but no other emollients do so much for itching, scaly, cracked, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and chapped soles, nor do so economically. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 25c. Skin Book. Address postmaster, "Cuticura," Dept. T., Boston.
 See Tender-Hearted men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick, 25c. Sample free.
