FIFTY YEARS IN THE CAB

"Billy" Doolittle's Fine Record as an Engine Driver.

VETERAN OF THROTTLE PULL

Lifetime Spent on a Locomotive, with Only One Serious Accident and No Black Mark Against Him.

SIoux FALLS, S. D., March 22--In the employ of railroads since he was 14 years of age, and forty years in an engine cab for one line of railroad is the record which has been made by William T. Doolittle, a veteran engineer of Sioux Falls.

In addition to holding the throttle on a locomotive on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railroad for the period of forty years, he also found time to serve as a member of the city council, as mayor of Sioux Falls and as a member of the waterworks commission which installed the present municipal waterworks system in Sioux Falls.

"Billy" Doolittle, as he is known to thousands, was born at Lowdownville, O., and had barely reached his fourteenth year when he began a three-year's apprenticeship in the shops of the Pennsylvania Central railroad. At 19 he was running a locomotive for that system. Many thousands of miles of rails had been run under his cab before he was 25, when he married and came west.

First Train Over Tracks.
In the northwest at that early day he found a pioneer country with few railroads nosing their way among small towns widely scattered among virgin hills, valleys and prairie. In his cab on the front of a Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha train on March 16, 1873, he helped lead the way into a new country. His first run was between St. James, Minn., and Sioux City, Ia., and his home at that time was in Sioux City. Five years later, when the Omaha built west from Worthington, Minn., he received orders to take out another train. It was the first passenger train to run into Sioux Falls, at that time an outpost of civilization containing a small number of modest but enthusiastic citizens. There was joy in the new town on the banks of the Big Sioux river the night that the first passenger train arrived with "Billy" Doolittle at the throttle.

Then for a couple of years he returned to the St. James-Sioux City division, but finally was persuaded to come back to the Worthington-Sioux Falls run. Since 1880 he has pulled the throttle on locomotives that have hauled tens of thousands of people in and out of Sioux Falls, and in his work he has worn out many a strong steam horse that could not stand the wear and tear of the years as well as he.

One Close Call.
During his forty years' experience as an engineer he had only one serious accident and one near accident, which in itself is a remarkable record. The near accident brought him the commendation and thanks of a trainload of people for his quick action and steady nerves.

That was on a rainy night when a bridge was swept away ten feet in front of his locomotive on a run through the Floyd creek valley, between LeMars and Sioux City, Ia.

Running slowly and leaning out of his cab window to get what view he could in the darkness ahead, a lightning flash suddenly revealed a haystack. The haystack was a common enough thing in itself, but not to "Billy" Doolittle, when it appeared only a few feet ahead on his right-of-way. He snapped on the brakes and brought his train to a standstill only a few feet from the bank of the swollen and swift running creek, now assuming all the proportions of a great river.

Dismounting from his cab he investigated and found that the railroad bridge had been carried away by the flood. The hay stack on the right-of-way was floating on the surface of the river and had momentarily lodged against one of the bridge piers. Passengers on the train which was thus miraculously saved from plunging into the swollen waters were led in their protestations of thanks to the engineer.

But "Billy" was thankful for the good-will of another, who sent the lightning flash in time.

The accident which came near being fatal occurred during a blizzard on February 14, 1896, three miles west of Wor-

CONFESSON BY ONE BANDIT

Luther Simms Tells Story Implicating His Three Companions.

LED ASTRAY BY BAD COMPANY
Discovery of Explosives in Room Let by Him to Robbers Followed by Trip to Des Moines with Them.

Luther Simms, one of the four alleged bandits brought back from Des Moines Friday, has decided to turn state's evidence and has made a complete confession in which he asserts he was the victim of circumstances due to bad company.

Simms was closeted with Detective Chief Maloney and Detective Fleming all morning and at noon had completed his confession. He said that the other three men, Richardson, Concord and Christine, came to his home and remained for a few days prior to March 10. On the night of March 10 he said he looked into a suitcase which was owned by Concord and discovered in it several dynamite caps, some fuses, cotton, soap and nitroglycerin. He said he did not mention it to his roomers, but that night they left just before the men went out.

At 10 o'clock the next morning he arose, built a fire and was preparing to go to work when Concord came back, gave him $15 and asked him to bring the women folks to Des Moines, as he had good jobs for himself and Simms in the Iowa capital.

Conversation Overheard.
Simms said he overheard the other three men talking in Des Moines about buying the safe in a butcher shop in Omaha at Twenty-fourth and Parker streets, in which about $200 was taken. He ended his confession by telling of their arrest in a Des Moines hotel. He says he is going to tell all of his trial and try and save himself for the sake of his wife and child, who are here.

Detectives Fleming, Sullivan and Lacey returned last night from Des Moines with Charles Richardson, Luther Simms, Tom Concord and John Christine, the four yegmen who are charged with breaking and entering.

NOONDAY CLUB TO HOLD BANQUET NEXT THURSDAY

Next Thursday evening the Noonday club will hold its fourth annual banquet at the Rome hotel. The principal speakers will be Fritz E. Sandwall of Omaha, C. J. Ederquest, mayor of Madrid, Ia., and Dr. Gustave Andreen, president of Augustana college of Hook Island. A vocal solo will be rendered by Carl Nordstrom and a selection on the violin by Birger Enquist of this city. Delegations from several towns in Iowa and Nebraska are expected to attend and several representatives of the Nebraska legislature will be present.

Man from Nevada Falls for Old Game

Jason Heinlein of Abel, Nev., fell a victim to the old game of matching dollars and reported to the station that he had been "gipped" out of $10. Heinlein was staying at the Dewey hotel and struck up an acquaintance with three strangers. They became intimate and Heinlein was led to a dive in the lower part of town and separated from his coin by the old game. Later Lester Frances was arrested and identified by Heinlein as being one of his fleecers. Frances gave his home as New York City.
