Testimony Introduced that Frost & Co.'s Records Were Transcribed.

CHARGE ALASKAN LAND FRAUDS

Judge Landis Declares that Case Between U. S. and Albert Frost is Small in Comparison to New Exposure.

CHICAGO, March 23.—Testimony that the books of Albert C. Frost and company had been changed while they were in the hands of a receiver halted the trial against Mr. Frost and his four associates charged with Alaskan land frauds, and directed the inquiry into other channels. In the words of Judge Landis, before whom the trial is being conducted, "a question of the United States against Mr. Frost and the other defendants is a small offense compared with the charge just made."

When A. C. Frost and company failed three years ago, George M. Seward, one of the defendants in the land fraud charges, was appointed receiver and the books were turned over to him.

A. C. Frost and company, a corporation, is distinct from Mr. Frost's interest in the Chicago & Milwaukee Electric road and the Alaskan Central railroad.

Bookkeeper Says Names Erased. On examination by D. E. Townsend, special assistant attorney general W. F. Wandell, a bookkeeper for Frost, testified that since the books had been turned over to Mr. Seward as receiver certain names had been erased.

Among the names which had been erased was that of Richard Ballinger, former United States land commissioner and secretary of the interior.

Judge Landis questioned the witness himself.

"At whose direction did you erase the name of Mr. Ballinger?" asked the judge.

"At the request of Mr. Seward and Mr. Frost."

Judge Landis ordered the bailiff to summon several United States deputy marshals. They appeared a moment later and arrayed themselves before the door of the courtroom.

The jury was excused and Mr. Seward stepped before the bench. The deputy marshals entered.

Sends Marshal to Frost's Office. "Go to Mr. Frost's office," said the judge, "and seek out and bring into court every book of Mr. Frost's that is supposed to be in the hands of a receiver."

Attorneys for the defense objected to the proceedings.

"Your honor has no right to give such an order," protested A. B. Johnston.

"This issue is entirely aside from the trial of Mr. Frost and his assistants for land frauds. We have not been called in here to defend this case."

"Go get the books; what are you waiting for?" ordered Judge Landis, interrupting further remarks of Marston.

Ballinger Issues Statement. SEATTLE, Wash., March 23.—Richard A. Ballinger, former secretary of the interior, who has been mentioned by witnesses in the trial in Chicago of A. C. Frost and others, issued today a statement attempting to defend the government of coal lands in Alaska, made public today by the following statement:

"Neither I personally nor the law firm of which I was a member ever had anything to do with the Frost land claims in Alaska. Our firm was employed by Frost through Mr. Labree to give an opinion regarding the steps necessary under law to acquire coal lands in Alaska. This was before any of his claims were ever filed."

"If Frost caused our name to be erased it was for private reasons of which I cannot conceive. As land commissioner in 1907 I personally ordered the investigation of which the Frost case is the result."

ENGINEER STOPS TRAIN BEFORE TOPPLING BRIDGE

LYNDONVILLE, Vt., March 23.—Facing what appeared to be imminent death, the engineer of a passenger train from Montreal for Boston today brought the crowded coaches to a abrupt stop on the edge of a tottering bridge.

An instant later the structure, weakened by a flood, gave way under the weight of the locomotive and the engine with its crew plunged into the ice-choked stream.

The 125 passengers who scrambled out of the car to learn the cause of their sudden shaking up received a second shock when trainmen reported that another bridge over the Passumpsic river, a mile back, had been swept away a moment after their train had passed it.

The engineer and fireman, by a lucky chance, dropped into open water and swam ashore, not much the worse for their experience.

Youths Rob Station at Weston, but Are Quickly Caught

While Special Officer Fagin of the Rock Island was en route from Des Moines to investigate the robbery of the ticket office at Weston, Ia., yesterday he arrested two boys at Underwood who proved to be the robbers. He put the lads under arrest after questioning them and found in their pockets $75 and a number of express money orders stolen at Weston.

The youths admitted robbing the station and said that they committed the deed while the station agent was at dinner. They gave the names Will Briz and Dewey Woomer and say that their homes are in Grinnell. They ate well dressed and admit starting west on an adventure trip because they wanted to be like the dime novel and cowboy moving picture heroes.

When the agent at Weston returned from his lunch and found the office had been robbed he notified Sheriff Lindsey at Council Bluffs and organized a posse of Weston citizens, who started west when the sheriff and his deputies started overland toward Weston. They met half way without finding any trace of the robbers.

It was then that Special Agent Fagin was notified and the boys were found in an opposite direction.

The boys are in the county jail at Council Bluffs. They say they went Friday and Saturday in Omaha. Weston is ten miles east of Council Bluffs.

MORE STORIES ON COLONELS

Echoes from Washington Exhibition Far from Being Creditable.

TRUTH CONTINUES TO LEAK OUT

Confessions Made by Some Members of the Cavalade About Their Comrades Reveal Some Droll Incidents.

Echoes still are heard from the cavalcade exhibition put on in Washington by the Nebraska colonels at the recent inauguration and the latest tales form one of the most graphic chapters of the story.

It seems that some of the shrewdest of the colonels after having read the accounts of that part of the inauguration in which they took part, hurried to the front with news that was derogatory to the characters and horsemanship of the other members of the squad.

Recent communications challenge the assertion that Colonels Patrick C. Heafey and Thomas Jefferson O'Brien were the best horsemen in the aggregation and say furthermore that they were just as ludicrous characters as any in the spectacle the Nebraskans staged in the nation's capital.

Colonel J. J. O'Connor admits that his steed during the progress of the parade became so engrossed in the music being dispensed by the brass band that he carried him into the ranks of the pipers but while admitting this, he refuses to acknowledge, as the other colonels have declared, that he was the sorriest spectacle of the entire lot.

He and another one of the brigades who received dishonorable mention in the first reports assert that Colonels Heafey and O'Brien were the star members. Mr. O'Connor admits that Mr. Heafey had just as much difficulty mounting his horse and presented a more ludicrous sight than did Colonel Platt.

Colonel Heafey, it seems, was born and reared on the bogs of County Carey. He ran barefoot when a boy, they say, and his feet grew flat from contact with mud. So when kind friends attempted to insert them into the stirrups of a saddle mighty difficulties were met.

While riding in the parade Colonels Heafey and O'Brien may have looked and acted all right, say some of the colonels, but before and after the event they were as good as a bit of comedy acting as was staged in Washington.

Following the parade, says one of the squad, Messrs. Heafey and O'Brien were missed. A search for them lasting until after dark disclosed no trace of them.

At a late hour an aged negro reported to the Nebraska delegation that two horses were seen roaming loose in the Potomac bottoms. Further investigation revealed that these were the steeds of Colonels Heafey and O'Brien. The colonels were no where to be found. Neither were they again to be found in Washington. The next heard of them, says Mr. O'Connor, they were stopping at a hotel in Philadelphia which was considered a fine and respectable place 100 years ago.
