WHITE SLAVERS STILL ACTIVE

Disquieting Rumors Still Interfere with Work of the Committees.

WOMEN ARE PROVIDING HOMES

School Teachers Pay Special Attention to Young Girls, Women and Children and Are Giving Valuable Help.

Rumors that white slavers have opened houses near the storm-stricken part of the city and are resorting to more despicable practices in attempts to lure young girls to shame have aroused the good women of the neighborhood and the citizens' relief committee has received notices from many that girls whose homes were in the path of the storm will be provided with food, clothes and shelter at the private expense of these good Samaritans.

Mrs. J. G. White, 124 North Thirty-fifth street, came to the city hall and told the committee she would give at least twenty girls a home. Ten of these she will harbor in her own house, giving them food and clothes free of charge, and ten others she can place in good, clean homes.

"I could probably find homes for more than twenty," said Mrs. White. "But I now have good places for that number. I would be glad to have these girls who are without homes now call me, Harney 5427, or come to the Calvary Branch mission, of which I have charge."

Offers of Homes.

Others who have risen to the need to protect the girls and have offered their homes or rooms for from one to half a dozen are: Mrs. C. D. Armstrong, Thirty-fourth and Woolworth; Mrs. C. A. Alden, 284 Harney; Mrs. M. J. Edwards, 1811 North Thirty-fourth; Mrs. Henry Frankfort, Twenty-fifth and Woolworth; Mrs. George Gifford, 1021 Howard; Mrs. G. W. Preston, 3612 Martha; Mrs. George A. Pope, 4307 North Fortieth avenue.

Miss Isabelle Lowndes, dancing instructor, has thrown open her rooms and asked the special investigators to help her secure the girls most in need now.

From every section of the city, from the most luxurious to the most humble home, telephone calls or special messengers have come to the city hall with the message: "Our doors are open; we want to help." Two hundred and fifty school teachers will lend material aid in searching out the young girls who are in great danger or who have suffered from the storm. In command of seven teachers they trooped into the district with Red Cross relief bands around their arms.

Commanding the teachers at the several stations are Mrs. Jeannette I. Woodward, station No. 1; Mrs. Nora H. Lemmon, station No. 2; Mrs. Cora S. Anderson, station No. 3; Mrs. Clara H. Mason, No. 4; Miss Mary Austin, No. 5; Miss Emma Rosicky, No. 6; Miss Alice Hittie, No. 9.

The teachers in command will report to Major Hartmann the condition of the sufferers in the several districts. They will work in squads of twenty-five or thirty and will visit every section of the devastated region. Particular attention will be paid by these teachers to the condition of young girls, children and mothers. They have become personally acquainted with the residents in the districts where they will work and are, therefore, qualified to judge of the needs of the people.

Visiting Soldier Reports Progress and Gives Praise

How the sights and work in the tornado district is impressing the out-of-town militia men can be gathered from the report made by R. A. Hanna on his return to his home in Lincoln on leave of absence, who is quoted in a Lincoln newspaper as follows:

"The progress which has been made in the reconstruction of parts of Omaha following the tornado of Sunday has been remarkable. Searchers have now gone through the entire ruins and removed all valuables. Now what remains to be done is to rebuild that part of the city. And even that work is progressing rapidly. Carpenters and other workmen are busy on the scene of destruction and on many of the houses demolished roofs have already been replaced.

"The Lincoln guardsmen have fared well during their service, and with the exception of two men, all are in good health. Since their arrival in Omaha the Lincoln men have been stationed at the south end of the storm-swept district, the part which was filled most largely with the expensive homes. The men are on duty twelve hours and sleep off twelve. Quarters are maintained in the armory, where cots are furnished for all.

"Criticism has been heard in Omaha over the fact that the guardsmen and regulars have been assigned almost exclusively to the south end of the demolished district, leaving the north end, where many of the poorer persons lived, almost unguarded. With the removal of valuables, guard work is now nearly completed, and the men may be recalled soon.

"Some little alarm has been felt in Lincoln among friends and relatives of the men in Company F over the report that one had lost his mind as a result of the scenes of destruction and horror. The man was not of the Lincoln company, but was a militiaman from Omaha who was stationed at the telephone building which directly following the tornado was turned into a temporary hospital."

STALLION REGISTRATION HELD VOID BY COURT

(From a Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, Neb., March 29.—(Special Telegram.)—The supreme court has declared unconstitutional the law enacted in 1911 which created the Nebraska Stallion Registration commission. The court affirmed the decision of the Howard county district court.

The case was started by Frank Iams of St. Paul, who alleged that the commission was interfering with the business of the horseman. He attacked the constitutionality of the act.

The court held the act unconstitutional because it created executive officers which was beyond the authority of the legislature.

Judge Letton in his opinion suggested that if the act is a good one the present legislature can remedy the defect by creating a commission out of the present executive officers.

AD CLUB SUGGESTS THE DISPOSITION OF PRIZES

Principals of the schools are requested to ascertain the wish of the pupils. The contest will be held, and the papers will be in by May 9, but in place of cash, it is suggested that a medal, inscribed to show the amount given to the relief fund, be presented. Each winner is then to be accredited with the amount of his winning, on the books of the relief committee.
