An Open Letter to the Members of The Conservative Savings & Loan Association:

An investigation of the entire stricken district, made on the 28th inst. by the officers of your Association, enabled them to more accurately determine the extent of damage suffered by our borrowing members. While there was much in this trip to depress, there was this to encourage, that on every side there was evidence that the people of the city as a unit, are taking hold in an earnest effort to promptly restore properties to their former condition and to get those suffering most back into their own homes. Hundreds were busy reroofing and repairing houses and other hundreds were clearing away the debris. Ernest activity was manifest on every hand.

We found that about 5% of our borrowing members were damaged; that not more than 2% have suffered the practically complete destruction of their properties and that not more than 1% of our borrowing members will be obliged either to give up their properties, or to receive public assistance by way of second mortgage loan advances or otherwise.

Possibly a majority of our members whose properties were damaged have already begun the task of restoration, using their own savings funds, or accepting loans from friends, or receiving additional small loans of this Association.

To the limit of our ability, under a law which jealously safeguards the interest of those members who have placed their savings and investments with us, we stand ready to lend all assistance possible to those of our borrowing members who need financial aid at this juncture. Because of our absolute protection against ultimate loss under our Blanket Tornado Policy of $150,000.00, and because of our strong Reserve and Undivided Profit Account of $250,000.00, we are already going to the legal limit of the proportion we may loan on property where, under all circumstances, such a course seems justifiable.

The Conservative Association is in an exceptionally strong position to aid its members at this particular time, and we are putting forth every effort to see that funds now in our care, or hereafter placed with us, are used to the best advantage in the re-building of homes.

No loss whatever can come to any of the building associations of the city because of the recent disaster. All associations wisely and amply protected their savings and investing members against just such a contingency as this by tornado insurance and strong reserve funds.

The great consideration just now is for every citizen to aid in any possible way in the restoration of properties and in the cleaning up of the debris—either with contributions of money, or by personal service. The citizens of no city ever responded more promptly or unselfishy than have our people at this crisis, and all should continue in this well-doing until Omaha is a better city than it was the day before the disaster.

Geo. F. Gilmore, President.
