AFTER DAYS OF GRIEF HE DISCOVERS INSURANCE

The Western Laborer in the current issue prints the following incident to the tornado: "He is a lucky one coming out of the tornado wreck; William Gentleman, a well known and respected old citizen, lost heavily by the tornado Easter night. In a few days he gathered himself together and began to look around for a loan to repair the damages to his building. The grilling he was put to by the bank officials got on his already shattered nerves and he finally wound up the interview by telling the banker to go to. Then he worried for days until he was most sick. One day last week a friend met him and listened to his story of the tornado, and the disappointment he felt when he could not make a loan. After he has finished his story the friend said: 'Did you look at your insurance policy since the tornado?' He said he did not. Then his friend advised him to look up his policies and see what they contained. On reaching home he dug into the drawer where the policies were scattered, and lo and behold one of them provided for the payment of $1,000 in case of loss by fire or tornado. Gee! but that put youth into the old gentleman. It was more than enough to put him in the clear. Now, ain't that a refreshing tornado story?"

TWO APARTMENTS WITH ONE DOOR RESULT IN FIST FIGHT

W. E. Froyne, 248 Ames avenue, charged with assault and battery on the person of A. E. Hill of the same residence, was released under $50 bonds, the case being continued until Monday. Froyne and Hill had to pass through the same door in order to get into their respective apartments in the flat building in which they live. Froyne had locked the door and when Hill unlocked it he proceeded to beat him up. Hill had several witnesses to testify against Froyne in court, among whom was Rev. C. Bader of the Pearl Methodist church, who happened to pass the two while they were in combat on the front stoop. The case was continued to allow the defendant time to secure a cluster of witnesses.

LIMIT PLACED ON MONEY SENT TO BROKEN FRIEND

The Western Passenger association has adopted a new rule with reference to people sending money to friends at a distance and who are broke. In the past if a party had five, Froyne had locked the door and when Hill unlocked it he proceeded to beat him up. Hill had several witnesses to testify against Froyne in court, among whom was Rev. C. Bader of the Pearl Methodist church, who happened to pass the two while they were in combat on the front stoop. The case was continued to allow the defendant time to secure a cluster of witnesses.

STORM BLOWS OFF MORTGAGE

One Family Which Seems to Benefit by the Big Easter Wind. Insurance is Adjusted Quickly, the Mortgage Paid and Most of Repairs Made from Balance from Insurance.

Stories of the freaks of the big wind of Easter Sunday are almost as abundant as the kindling marking its path. Narrow escapes from personal injury, capers of flying timber, houses almost unscathed amid the ruins of neighbors, and other amazing incidents of good fortune, brighten the gloomy story of devastation. The story of the way the tornado blew a mortgage off a home is entitled to a place in the collection of unique wonders. For obvious reasons names and location are omitted. On March 31, 1911, thrifty family of five purchased a cottage and lot on a desirable residence street, paying down sufficient cash to warrant a loan of $1,500 obtained from a savings and loan association. This association required borrowers to pledge fire and tornado insurance to the amount of the loan as protective security. By uncommon thrift on the part of the family, two children, as well as the father, being wage earners, the debt on the home was reduced to $544.4 when the blow fell on March 23. On one side of this thrifty home three larger and more imposing neighbors' homes were leveled to the foundations. On the other side two were shattered, a third unroofed. On the opposite side of the street, half a score were wrecked or nearly so. But the cottage, like a broad, low-browed, rakish craft in a stormy sea, ducked under the billow of whirling wind and rose almost uninjured in the subsequent calm. A few bunches of shingles were swept away, windows were smashed, and the interior smeared with rubbish. Insurance adjusters were on the spot the morning after, a satisfactory adjustment of the damages arrived at, and a draft for $95.50 handed to the family. With this balance due on the mortgage was paid off, and the remainder is to be devoted to repairs as far as it will go. The family's greatest concern, the stimulus for their energies, was a home free of debt. Fulfillment came quicker than anticipated, and in a most unexpected way, and the family is one of the very few in Omaha that harbors no hard feelings toward the tornado that blew away the mortgage.
