Windsor School Pupils Give Relief to Many Sufferers

Through the courtesy of friends, patrons and teachers the pupils of Windsor school have done much to help the tornado sufferers. Two high school pupils are being paid regular wages that they may finish their year's work. Forty quilts and blankets, four dozen children's dresses, four dozen boy's waists, twelve gowns, three dozen skirts, a large load of clothing carefully mended, were contributed. Four families were started in housekeep ing. Nearly all of these articles were delivered by the older boys and girls of cific holdup will be heard in the federal the school. Relief Work is Temporarily Halted to Secure Estimates

The reconstruction work of the relief ommittee is slightly hampered at present by the fact that there are so many cases on which the necessary estimates have not yet been made. The work cannot go ahead on these until the estimates of the damage and the amount of money required to repair or reconstruct are made and acted upon by the working ommittee. This does not mean that the econstruction committee has no work to do at present, as the gangs of carpenters are out every day, and the housemovers are also working on cases that have already been passed upon, but the workers will coon catch up to the available cases unless appraisers are sent out soon to pass upon more wrecked homes.

To avoid this difficulty the reconstruction people will put four crews of appraisers into the field Sunday. One will be headed by John W. Towle, one by Grant Parsons, one by A. F. Rasmussen and one by some man who has not yet been selected. They will drive over the ground in automobiles and will inspect the various homes that have been reported. The committee has a list of 150 homes on which estimates are to be made as soon as possible. The four crews will take about twenty-five of these next Sunday and will work on them all day. The estimates made by these crews will then be submitted to the working committee at their regular afternoon meetings, when the disposition of the cases will be taken up.

HOWELL GOES TO KANSAS CITY Unless Florence Plant is Enlarged at Once Omaha Will Have to plant at Florence are not sufficient to "settle" water as fast as it will be pumped through the new Twenty-eighth avenue water main Water Commissione garding the European wars and Russia's Howell and the Water hoard's architect, George T. Prince, are in Kansas City atudying the reservoir system of that city and as soon as they return bids for three new reservoirs for the Omaha plant will be advertised for and work begun at . noe in an attempt to forestall a water famine this summer.

After a row with engineers and man agers of the pumping stations Howell was convinced that the Florence station could not supply the Twenty-eighth avenue forty-eight-inch main under present conditions and a tardy move has been made to construct new reservoirs. Howell at first insisted on shutting own the river pumping station and supplying the city with water from the Florence plant. This plan was debated at length, but engineers at last brought the water commissioner around to an understanding of the situation, which they offer proof to show that water pumped through the Twenty-eighth main at the rate necessary this summer would be so muddy that it would be unfit and even dangerous to use.

Double Capacity. city of 25,000,000 gallons will be constructed this summer. As soon as they are completed the Water board will begin the construction of six others of equal capacity, the arrangements now being to duplicate the present reservoir capacity of 78,006,000 gallons.

According to plans drawn by Prince th total cost of these improvements will be $859,000, of which $125,000 will be expended this summer.

While water will be turned into the new Twenty-eighth avenue main Friday and while that main could be of service in carrying dirty water in case of fire it will be of little practical use until the new reservoirs are ready.

These reservoirs will be built on substantially the same plan as the seven now in service at the Minnelusa station Howell argued for a shallower basin, but his engineers again forced him to see that while the water might clear more rapidly in shallow reservoirs it would have to flow faster through them in order to fill the emptying mains.

Lawn sprinkling has begun and the water commissioner is increasing the amount of water pumped, but the plant cannot, in the opinion of employes of the Water board, furnish all water needed this summer even it it is run at full capacity day and night. The Twenty eighth avenue main has not helped the

Property Losers in Tornado Should See Attorneys on Clause

That persons, who suffered property osses in the tornado and who have fire insurance policies carrying "lightning clauses" should consult attorneys as to the possibility of collecting insurance even though they cannot claim damages from fire, is the advice of the committee f three lawyers appointed by the Douglas County Bar association to prepare a brief for the guidance of tornado sufferers. The committee, which is composed

Richard C. Hunter, Byron G. Burbank and Nelson C. Pratt, found precedents which the members say, indicate that since a tornado is largely an electrical storm it is a question for a jury whether lightning was an efficient agency is destruction caused by it.

Holders of policies are accordingly warned to give notice of losses to the company's home offices and not to invalidate them by falling to comply with directions in the policies.
