Lieutenant Hayes Leaves the Force; Long in Service

Immediately after the annual police review yesterday afternoon, Lieutenant Thomas Hayes, official drill master and the first theatrical censor ever appointed in Omaha, notified his superiors that he will resign his office June 1 and retire to civil life.

He is a veteran of the civil war, served in both the army and navy, and was with the commission. At the time he Indian campaigns in the Dakotas.

On March 16, 1888 he was appointed to the police department and served until 1898, when political strife made him retire for a few years.

When Chief Dunn received Hayes' resignation he was loath to take it, but finally accepted when Hayes insisted. Hayes would have retired several months ago, but for the fact that the annual review was close at hand and he wanted to get the matter in proper shape.

It was said last night that when Hayes retires the position of lieutenant will be discontinued. Esra Ferris, patrolman, seems to be the unanimous choice of the department for the position of drillmaster, although Horace Corneau is also prominently mentioned.

RALSTON RISES FROM RUINS

Work of Restoration Being Pushed at Wrecked Town.

Factories Ready to Resume

Howard Stove Works Almost Rebuilt, While Some Business Enterprises Have Begun Operations After Disaster.

Ralston, practically wiped off the map by the tornado of Easter Sunday, has risen from its ruins with an enthusiastic purpose that is the admiration of all who have seen the work of restoration.

After the tornado had passed the little town was a heap of ruins and business men declared that the town would never recover from the blow.

The Howard Stove works, which was practically destroyed, has been rebuilt and will be in full operation within a few days.

The Omaha Furniture factory is now completed with the exception of the office and factory work was started in its walls this week.

The Banner Varnish factory has been rebuilt and is in operation. Under the direction of Postmaster D. L. Ham, the postoffice building is nearly ready for occupation.

The Brown Truck company plant has not been restored yet, but it is expected that a newer and more modern factory will be equipped where the old one stood.

The new Ralston bank, which was destroyed a few days before it opened its doors for business, will open soon in a building built especially for it.

The work of restoration has fallen upon the shoulders of a committee of citizens headed by Mayor C. M. Skinner, L. Howard and M. C. Powell, who have toiled without ceasing. Mayor Skinner in particular is credited with much glory because of his untiring efforts in the work of restoring the little town.

Rebuilding and clearing the streets has given employment to many who were thrown out of work by the destruction of the factories.

REV. CHAS. W. SAVIDGE TO ORGANIZE A LONELY CLUB

Rev. Charles W. Savidge wants all young people who are lonely and have no place to spend their evenings to write him a letter at 322 Brandels building. A Lonely club recently organized in Chicago had a most beneficial effect upon a lot of law students and girls who were at a loss just what to do on certain evenings.

A clubroom has since been engaged and is now being visited each evening by scores of lonesome ones.

If the response is hearty enough Mr. Savidge expects to set up quarters convenient to the downtown district. He has long considered it and the recent movement in Chicago, with its attendant success, has put new impetus to the execution of his idea.
