EVERY PLACE A DOVE COTE

Actual Latter Features of the Game Wherein Men and Women Take a Chance-Romantic Novelties.

A thousand ways lead to the altar, and many of them are at least as strange and unconventionl as that by which a bride was recently won as the prize for victory in a cross-country race by a brace of rival cowboys on bronchos. In certain parts of Wales, it is said, the old world survives, and before a man can lead a maid to the altar he must race in hot pursuit of the father or brother, who seeks to carry her off on horseback and took the gratifying form of $4.00. rescue her for a more agreeable fate.

But wives have been won by contests more novel than these. Only last year, it street brokers were fluttered by the ap-

She carried a value containing scores were to determine who should be a number of tickets which here the her happy possessor. Last year, too, if we are to believe the newspaper, a very charming young lady in society awarded her hand to the one of four suitors who took the first place in a billiard tournsment. And there are at least three recorded cases in which matrimonial destiny has been determined over the chess-

Even more singular was the method recently adopted by a wealthy Neapolitan called Tesino, who offered his name and fortune to the woman who could best sook macaroni to suit his exacting palate. No fewer than 130 wemen, we are told, entered with sest into the contest for se custom of "marriage by capture" still few weeks later the successful macaroni tempting a prize, with the result that a expert was led to the altar by the dulighted signor, whose wedding present

Ye're Anither.

Two Scots met in an li-hole match. On one side of the course there was a high railway embankment. Over this railway it happened Jock drove his ball. They hinted for it a long time, but could not find it. Sandy wanted Jock to give it up, but Jock wouldne, for a lost ball means a lost hole. And finally Jock took a new ball frae his poke, dirtied it, and pretended to find it. "Ye're a leear, Jock!" responded Sandy.
