

Bringing Up Father

Copyright, 1913. International News Service.

Drawn for The Bee by George McManus

ules for Husbands Who Complain

By DOROTHY DIX.

Says the young husband irritably his wife: "I wish you could learn make bread like my mother made it." Says the young wife tartly to her husband: "I wish you could learn to make dough like my father made

This story is an ancient chestnut of the domestic variety, but it enjoys a well-deserved immortality because it presents to us in a nutshell, as it were, the chief reason of why marriage is so often a failure.

It is because both husband and wife are more concerned with contemplating the other's deficiencies than they are their own lack of efficiency. This is particularly true of men who are so busy watching their wives' faults that they haven't time to notice how far they fall short of making good themselves. And men could, with profit, occasionally reflect that if their wives do not always measure up to their ideal of what a perfect woman should be, they also bear no striking resemblance to the romantic heroes and demigods that their wives thought they were marrying. There is the man, for instance, who is always scolding his wife about her extravagance, and who is threatened with an epileptic attack every time the bills come in on the first of the month. If there is a martyr on earth he knows that he is that afflicted individual, and he sheds tears of self-pity when he thinks of how this good money goes for hats and gowns and Paris confections. Instead of blaming his wife so much for spending money, it would be salutary for his soul for him to remhember that if he were a better business man, or if he hustled a little more, he could afford to give his wife the things she wants. Perhaps if he didn't waste so much money on smokes and drinks and poker what his wife spends wouldn't come so near to breaking his heart.

Then there's the man who complains that his wife nags, and that as a curtain lecturer, especially along about 2

Grandma Talks About Babies

Has a large Circle of Listeners Who Profit by Her Wisdow and Experience.

In almost any settled community there's grandma who knows Mother's Friend. fot only is she reminiscent of her own experience, but it was through her recom-mendation that so many young, expectant mothers derived the comfort and blessing of this fameus remedy.

Mother's 1 lend is applied externally to Mother's Friend is applied externally to the abdomen, stomach and breasts, allays all pain, avoids all nauses, and prevents caking of the breasts.

It is quickly and wonderfully penetrating, permits the muscles to expand without the strain on the ligaments, and prepares the sys-tem so thoroughly that the crisis is passed almost without the slightest distress. Thus there need be no such thing as dread or fear. No better nor more cheering advice call No better nor more cheering advice can be given the expectant mother than to suggest the use of Mother's Priend. She will take courage from the beginning. The days will be cheerful, the nights restroi. Thus the health is preserved, the mind is in repose and the period is an unending one of quiet, joyful anticipation.

of quiet, joyful anticipation.
You can obtain Mother's Friend of any druggist at $1.00 a bottle. Do not forget nor neglect to be supplied with this greatest remedy ever devised for motherhood. It is unfailing. Write at once to Bradfield Regulator Co., 138 Lamar Bidg. Atlanta, Ga., for their very interesting and instructive sook of advice for expectant mothers.

o'clock in the morning, she is a world benter. He considers himself a sadly misused man, and wonders what his guardian angel was doing when he got tied up with that kind of a wife.

Wouldn't it make for reformation if he would sit down and consider his own delinquencies instead of his wife's performances? No woman marries for the pleasure of sitting up at home by herself, through a lonely evening, waiting to open the door for a man who can't find the keyhole himself, and if under such circumstances she does utter a few surging thoughts he should, at least, have the justice to admit that he inspired them by his conduct. The man who spends his evening in the bosom of his family, doesn't have to explain where he has

Then there's the man who bemoans his fate because his wife isn't domestic, and because she has the society bee or the club bee in her bonnet and never wants to stay at home.

Wouldn't it be a good thing for him to think a few thoughts about how he's ever done to make home attractive to her? Wouldn't it be only fair for him to reflect that while he expects his wife to stay put in the house, he was spending his evenings at the club or the corner saloon or some other place where there was something doing? Also that when he did stay at home he snoozed over his paper from dinner till bedtime, and was just about as conventionally thrilling as a stuffed bear would have been.

Honestly, now, Mr. Man, did you ever know a single, solitary case where a woman wasn't nailed to her own fireside if she had the luck to be married to a husband who was good-natured and genial and companionable, and who took a real heart interest in Oriantal rugs and curtains and casserole cooking? Whenever you see a woman going mad over clubs and society or philanthropy set it down that she is married to a man who has no more domestic instincts than a fox terrier, and that she has given up trying to make a home by herself and is attempting to fill in her life with a manufactured in-

And there is the man who sobs over himself because he has outgrown his wife, and at 45 she is fat and dowdy and commonplace, while he's better jooking and more fascinating that he ever was before in his life. If this doesn't entitle him to an affinity, he doesn't know what Does he ever ask himself how his wife came to be what she is, while he is what he is? Does he ever think that the reason he is so prosperous is because her economy laid the foundation of his fortune and he climbed up to success on her shoulders? That's why they are so bent. Her complexion went in the first few years after their marriage when she burnt it out over the kitchen stove to save the price of a cook. Those knots on her fingers represent the days she tolled over the washtub. The luster of her eyes discmed in the long nights when she walked sick babies, or sewed endless little clothes. All the energy of her went to pushing him forward, and if she lags behind it's because of what she gave him and he accepted. It's his fault more than hers.

And there's the man who says bitterly that his wife no longer cares for him, and that he's nothing but a money-making machine for her.

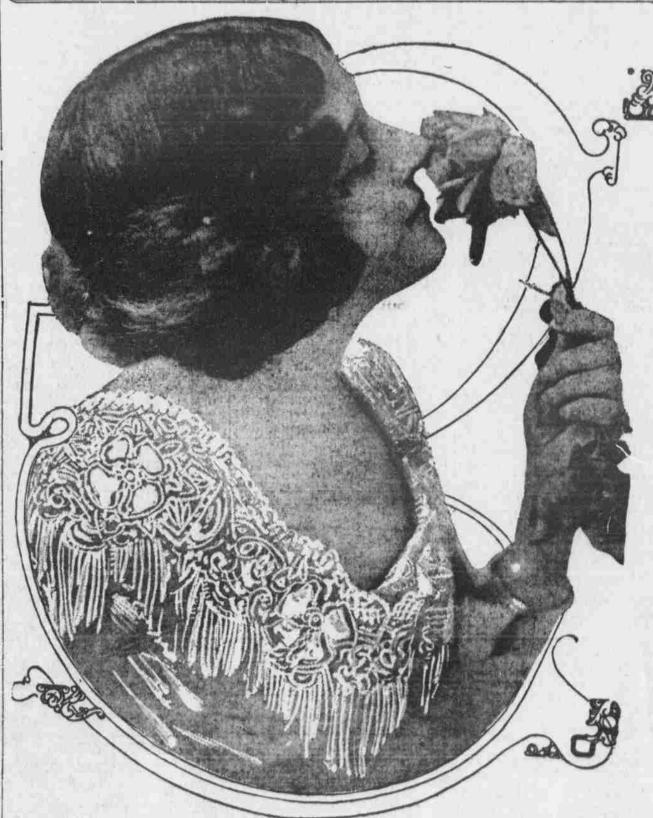

Does he ever ask himself why his wife should love him? What does he do to keep the sacred fire alight on the altar as well as to aid the search after beauty," of her heart? He supports her. He sup- said pretty Miss Gertrude, with laughplies her with food and clothes. Any ing earnestness. "I used to be afraid woman who keeps house earns her board to smile all I wanted to for fear I would and keep. You pay a cook or housemaid get those heavy lines from nostril to lip; more than that, so that makes no claim and then suddenly I became aware of all of gratitude upon a wife.

do more than pay her bills. If you don't, drooping, disagreeable looking lips. if you never show her any little delicate decided at once to take a chance on the attention, if you never make love to her, lesser evil, and began curling my mouth if you rarely speak to her except to find up at the corners, even when I was not fault, what's to keep her from falling in particularly anxious to 'look pleasant, love with some other man? What's to please; now as a result there may be prevent her from feeding her hungry lines around my mouth, but they are lines heart with the affection some other man of pleasantness-aren't they?" she added question, Mr. Man.

When a marriage turns out badly the smilling-and I recover." man invariably blames it on his wife, but the fault is his oftener than it is hers. in life happen to be among the greatest have been sun-burned and tanned and He's guilty of at least contributory negli-

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

"Study Your Expression." Says Pretty Gertrude Barnes

Miss Barnes in a summery pose.

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

"Smile and curl up your mouth corners," said merry Gertrude Barnes. She is-a-fine-old-world mouth. had just finished doing five character songs in characteristic costumes. She said with a smile of my own; "but how the stranded show-girl longing for the they make lines?" "old Kentucky home" to the mirth-mad this earnest and successful effort to of keeping my skin in good condition. please her audience left her cool, buoyant They are cold water, sunburn and tan." and ready to give the whole world of girls the kindly benefit of her study of how to have "a sane mind in a healthy body."

"Expression is important for character the hard-looking faces one sees-and the A man who keeps his wife's love must chief reason for the hardness was down-

Merry good nature and kindly interest

twinkle that reflects from big brown eyes, enough to throw off the little temporary to the merry dimpled corners of her this- blemishes of lines and wrinkles. "Oh, my circle is not complete yet.

"You may safely go on smiling," I had run the gamut of emotion from the about all the other expressions you bring it all you can, and hunt and ride if you naughty little "enfant terrible" through in rapid succession to your face-don't can. Riding is wonderful for the muscles "Not lines that stay," answered Miss. exponent of "Row, row," And all Barnes. "You see, I have a few methods neither, swim. Anyone can swim if she "Sunburn and tan!" I exclaimed. "I thought they were fatal to the fine texture of the skin." "Perhaps they are fatal to the old worn-out outer layer they destroy. But they give the fresh new layer walting underneath a chance and they help give strong, firm flesh, good healthy flesh, without which fine-textured skin is just impossible. And sunburn and tan come from plenty of sunlight and fresh air. which are the best things in the whole world for the health and beauty seeker. So there you are in a perfect circle, when you have added plenty of cold waterand served up a fine, healthy skin on a background of strong, firm flesh that can throw off the little lines you make temporarily by twisting your face around into any extreme of expression you

"Cold water-cold water-cold water! offers her? Consider that side of the anxiously. "And sometimes when I am Won't you sing its praises very earnestly, ready to feel cross my mouth keeps on please? And tell all the girls not to be afraid of the charm of expression-they may indulge in it all they like if they charms of Miss Barnes' animated, ex- cold-watered, with good massage-like makes her work so pleasing and converpressive face, and very pleasing is the spisshes that makes the skin strong sation with her a true delight. "Of course, laughed the cheery star, "I have a little more to say about fresh air. Go out into of the limbs; hunting develops the muscles of the waist- but if you can do just chooses to learn how-and it is a most wonderful, inspiring, lung-filling, flesh hardening form of exercise. "I manufactured a lot of my own healthfulness by going after it very earnestly. Being a water-baby and being an outdoor girl are almost equally important; they both make you healthy, and if you are wise enough to be both your chances of being a beauty increase. "You see, fresh air and exercise have trained my figure for me, so I don't have to rely on corsets to do it. They have trained my skin for me, so I don't have to hold my face in a mask-like expression in order to avoid lines and wrinkles -so there is my basis, and then I go ahead and try to make the most of my looks, although I know perfectly well that the result is not beauty."

But on this latter bit of information Miss Gertrude Barnes has a monopoly, for good features added to the winsome charm of a bright face and the pose of a healthy body surely deserve the title of

"Now about arranging your face to the est advantage," said Miss Barnes with the earnest attention to every detail that

Sisters All

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

When Eve was told, and Adam, too, To pack their raiment and skidoo, Poor Adam said, "It can't be helped," But this is what his sweetheart yelped: "If woman had a vote, you bet We'd be within the Garden yet."

When Cleopatra, wondrous girl, Made all of Antony's senses whirl, Charming him through the passing hours Within her Alexandria bowers; Brave Antony remarked: "My sweet, I'll lay the whole world at your feet!" From Cleopatra's lovely throat Came, "Give us girls a chance to vote!"

When pretty little Lucy Gray, Out in a blizzard lost her way, She said, "It's wrong that I should roam-If women voted, I'd be home!"

When cute Maude Muller raked the hay, She heard the old Judge make his play. He stopped and asked her for a drink; She said, "Your honor, I don't think! I hope you'll have a parching throat Until us ladies get a vote."

Don'ts for Girls

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Don't compare the criticisms of your parents with the compliments paid you by a young man to the detriment of the former. The criticisms are at least based on sincerity.

Don't regard every compliment paid you as a reason why you should have your photograph taken. Frequent visits to a photographer are signs of a vain

Don't accept attentions from the wrong kind of a man, excusing yourself because they mean nothing and are trivial. Remember that the girl who walks only as far as the corner with the wrong kind it is inadvisable for a girl who wishes to be accepted at face value as a lady to use any makeup on the street, for she is sure to look conspicuous and artificial -for the one all-embracing reason that without the earnest study an actress gives the subject the gentle art of makeup becomes a farce, instead of an art. "However, any girl can teach her eyebrows to grow in a smooth, pretty curve by brushing them at night and morning with a tiny brush; and good cream will keep the face clean as to its pores as well as on the surface; and a well-poised head adds a final touch of charm. Girls should cultivate the habit of holding their heads with the natural poise of a flower instead of jutting forward like a crag. bending back with the curve of a lightning-struck tree. "And learn to design your own clothes, ality will be a rounded whole without one inrring note." And since there is no jurring note in Miss Barnes' unaffected, wholesome personality, this final bit of advice fits in with the beauty study of an expert in whatever she undertakes-and is well worth following.

M. MAGUIRE, Esq.

of man will meet every one she knows on

Don't seek information from a dream book. No one expects much from the girl who seeks information from a dream book instead of from an encyclopedia.

Don't get the prevalent notion that the young man who spends a month's salary in giving you a good time thinks more of you than the man who refuses to spend a week's. The latter loves more sanely.

Don't overlook the importance of a love affair with your father. That is the best investment in the love of man that any

Don't forget that mother is a human being, and sometimes gets tired.

Don't feel the third time a young man has called on you that it is time for you to take possession and demand that he account for the evenings he spent some-

Don't resent the desire of your parents to know something of the young man who calls on you. They fall in their duty to you if they lack this desire, or fall to act upon it.

Don't give your heart to a man who refers to his parents as "the old lady" and "the old man."

Don't ever outgrow the habit of your childhood of telling your mother when you get home all that happened at the party. It is more important that you Make them express you so your person- tell her what happens now you are grown than that you told her when you > Don't forget, if you have a little that you have more than your parents had in their youth, and that they have struggled every day since you came into the world with that unselfish ambition in view.

Are the Fly and Mosquito Dangerous?

The fly, with spongy teet, collects the invisible germs of diseases, spreads hem over our food and poisons us with typhoid and cholers. The mosquito with its bite injects into our veins malaria and yellow fever. The bacteria of consumption or frip on a system of the present for th tion, or grip, are everywhere present for us to breaths into our lungs, which flows through our veius and arteries is our protection. It sho which flows through our veins and arteries is our protection. It should contain bealthy red and white blood corpuscles—capable of warding off these disease germs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood medicine and alterative made entirely without alcohel, a pure glyceric extract of bloodroot, golden seal. Oregon grape root, queen's root, mandrake and stone root, which has enjoyed a good reputation for over forty years. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter. during the winter.

"About forty years ago while in Newark, New Yere and favor," writes Ma. MIGHARI, MAGUERA of National I Rana. I went to Kaness City and in the spring of 127 fever returned. Doctors and everything I tried failed a Finally I saw Dr. Pierce's Colden incident Discovery adve one bottle of it and the chills vanished. In about a p I felt them coming back so I got another bottle and it any symptoms of fever or ague since. That is all of two for I bed the chills about twelve years before I started to Medical Discovery."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasent Pellets are for liver lits.