

JOHN L. WEBSTER SARCASTIC

Thinks the Water Board Might Have Invited Him to Meeting.

BOARD HOLDS SECRET SESSION

Lead and Angry Sounds Float Through the Keyhole and Webster Comes Out Smiling—'He Wins,' Say Spectators.

Attorney John L. Webster of the Water board, being the acme and the very soul of punctuality, stepped tightly and merrily into the assemblage room of the board at the city hall last night. Two newspapermen, two meter salesmen and Member Patsy Heafey were in the room. The water commissioner had called the meeting at 7:30 o'clock sharp.

John Lee Webster's cheerful face wore its smile for fifteen minutes. When a quarter of an hour had slipped by and no water boarder had appeared the attorney began to frown. Then he remembered that the water commissioner had tried "to hawl him out" at the previous meeting.

"Where's the board?" he asked of Heafey. "Howell's office." "Meeting?" "Yes."

Silence ensued and after several minutes, in his most cultured, sarcastic drawl the general said:

"They might have invited us to that meeting. Any chance of their adjourning and coming up here."

"Oh, yes."

W. H. Buchols came in. "I'm about to adjourn this meeting," said Webster. "They're going to read minutes. I had that fixed once, but when this administration came in they insisted on changing it and taking up time reading minutes." It looked like the general was ready if not looking for trouble.

In Secret Session.

It was 8:30 o'clock when the board met. After awarding the contracts for two thirty-six-inch and one four-inch meter to the Simplex Meter company and the contract for four 400-horsepower boilers to the Wickes Boiler company for $15,578, a recess was taken and the board went into secret session in a room just off the assemblage room.

For thirty minutes the muffled sound of argument came through the keyhole and then loud and angry voices and the word "Dundee" impinged upon the eardrums of those in the outer office. Suddenly W. H. Buchols came stamping out. "Ten o'clock is my limit," he said, "and they know just where I stand on the Dundee matter."

When the board came out of its secret session all was serene.

"Heard high voices and angry arguments in there," said a reporter to Attorney Webster. "Anything to report?" "They've left it in my hands. Nothing definite."

Howell was grim; the general cheerful. "General wins," said spectators.

The "Dundee matter" concerns the claim of the George Bros. for pay for a main they laid at their own expense. It was over this main that Howell accused Webster of drawing a contract and leaving out the things he wanted in.

Members of the board will leave Sunday night for Minneapolis to attend a meeting of the American Water Works' association. Howell, Heafey, Wead and Sherman will probably go.

The new boilers for the Florence plant will increase the horsepower pumping capacity of the station to 4,000. The boilers must be in by the latter part of November.

EFFICACY OF PRAYER SHOWN

Fairly Adequate Response to Mother's Appeal Soothes the Pains of Tragedy.

Triplets, all boys, were born to Mrs. Louis Iser of 729 Prospect street, Brooklyn, in the burning of whose home, at El Rogers avenue, on January 31, last year, she and her husband lost all of their four children.

Iser, who is a prosperous kosher butcher, called Dr. Harold Rabinowitz of 44 Michigan street to his new home yesterday afternoon and soon the physician ushered three little boys in to the world. Each weighed six pounds and each was healthy and possessed of lusty lungs. Mrs. Iser was reported as doing well.

When the Iser home burned last year, through the explosion of a kerosene lamp, their four children were asleep. Two were dead when found and the other two died soon afterward. Mrs. Iser suffered from mental shock for several weeks and seemed to be inconsolable. All of their household goods were destroyed.

After a few weeks they established a new home in Prospect street and recently Mrs. Iser has been very happy. Her neighbors said she had prayed every day, many times every day, for children to take the places of those who lost. She told the physician today that she knew her prayers had been answered. Three of the children killed in the fire were boys. Three boys came yesterday.

Iser said that no mother in his family or in that of his wife had ever had triplets or even twins before. —New York Herald.

Obedient Orders. Murphy was a new cavalry recruit and was given one of the worst horses in the troop. "Remember," said the sergeant, "no one is allowed to dismount without orders."

Murphy was no sooner in the saddle than the horse kicked and Murphy went over his head. "Murphy," yelled the sergeant, when he discovered him lying breathless on the ground, "you dismounted!" "I did." "Did you have orders?" "I did."

"From headquarters?" "No, sir, from headquarters." —Ladies' Home Journal.

Loons and Their Plumage. A nature student who was viewing recently arrived feathered migrants through a field glass in Mill Creek park one afternoon was approached by a small boy, who said to him: "Say, mister, there's a funny looking bird on the upper lake. Did you see it?" The nature student replied in the affirmative.

"What's it?" "It's a loon in its winter plumage." "The boy was silent."

"Do you think you can remember that?" smiled the man. "Sure I can," the boy answered. "There's a girl next door to us that wears thin stockings and k-w-e-e-d-d dresses in the coldest kind of weather. I'll just think of her." —Youngstown Telegram.

New Books

DESERT GOLD. By Zane Grey. 288 Pp. $1.30. Harper & Bros. In this story of love and warfare on the Mexican border the author has given his readers plenty of thrilling excitement. Richard Cole, a rich man's son, after a disagreement with his father, has drifted about the west in half-hearted pursuit of work or adventure. In Casita—a village that lies half in the United States and half in Mexico—he meets an old college friend—George Thorne, now with the United States cavalry patrolling the border. Picturesqueness of scene blends with the vigorous action following the rescue of a beautiful Spanish girl by Thorne, and the love of the hero for a charming American girl, makes the story colorful and spirited to the end.

OUT OF THE DEPTHS. By Robert Ames Bennett. 290 Pp. $1.35. A. C. McClurg & Co. The chief figure in the story is a young engineer who has been ruined in character by the usual upbringing of a rich man's son. Having been discovered in the theft of another engineer's plans, he is disowned, and seeks service on a ranch. The influence on his character of the ranch owner's daughter, the jealous hatred of a cowboy, who is himself in love with this girl, and the part the eastern youth plays in enhancing the rancher's fortunes, make a story true in its lust for power and love.

GERTRUDE. By Edward Hungerford. 382 Pp. $1.35. McBride, Nast & Co. The book tells first of the rejuvenation of an old country tavern into a fascinating sort of inn, and then of the rejuvenation of the family that moved into it. The story moves, of course, about its central figure, Gertrude, the girl, who made herself strong and winsome and then conquered the tragedy of her own life. The characters are quaint and lovable, and the theme of the story is rather novel.

THE BEARS' CLAWS. By Grace Sartwell Mason and John Northern Hilliard. 351 Pp. $1.35. A. C. McClurg & Co. From her bronze cage in the rotunda of a New York hotel a tired stenographer or a New York hotel a tired stenographer who inherits the wanderlust and dreams and writes stories of romantic adventures in far lands is swept, at a day's notice, into the very whirlpool of the oriental life of which she has always dreamed. It becomes her lot to help her intrepid, resourceful engineer husband as he plans to build railroads through the Persian desert, and to thwart the practiced spies of Russia in their efforts to block his work. The story is a thrilling narrative of life and adventure in the far east, spiced with a flavor of the devious ways of international politics.

FARO NELL. By Alfred Henry Lewis. 246 Pp. $1.25. G. W. Dillingham Co. Faro Nell, herself, has all the honor and honesty of a God's eye, and the town of Wolfville is seen in its hours of sunshine and its hours of gloom. The characters which Mr. Lewis has used in his tales of the western frontier are all there and their lives and actions faithfully reflected.

THE PILGRIMS OF THE PLAINS. By Kate A. Aplington. 400 Pp. $1.35. F. G. Browne & Co. A story of the old Santa Fe trail telling the adventures of a pioneer group of travelers. It abounds in romance and its thrills are many. It is an interesting tale, told in a vivid and charming way.

THE WINGS OF PRIDE. By Louise Kennedy Mable. 254 Pp. $1.20. Harper & Bros.

This story leads the reader from social amenities in New York to a life of self-sacrifice in a western city. The transition from dilettante living to a battle with actual and basic problems makes the romance one of love and trial, but charming and interesting withal.

THE AIR PILOT. By Randall Parrish. 318 Pp. $1.35. A. C. McClurg & Co. The hero of this romance is Lieutenant Philip Desaud of the French army, the inventor of an improved aeroplane. Why his machine was withdrawn from the contest at the last moment and lost to sight, and why its inventor disappeared mysteriously, are the questions answered in a breathlessly moving yarn of international intrigue and the loyalty to Desaud of a young American newspaper woman, who balks a plot to steal the secret of his invention.

THE SOJOURNER. By Robert Dull Elder. 335 Pp. $1.30. Harper & Bros. From boyhood Jack Holliday has been in love with Violet Spencer, the sister of his best friend, Kenneth Spencer, his roommate at Princeton, cheats in an examination, and Jack feels bound to report him. Late on the night following the Junior prom. Violet, comes to Jack's room to plead for her brother, making his yielding the price of her love. He indignantly refuses the bribe and at one stroke loses the woman he loves and his best friend. Jack is expelled and disowned by his father. A year later finds him a cowboy on a western ranch, to which Kenneth comes on a visit to a mine in which he has an interest, and with him the girl to whom he is engaged. The drama that follows bears the stamp of reality and the characters are well drawn.

JOHN O' JAMESTOWN. By Vaughan Kester. 383 Pp. $1.35. Bobbs-Merrill Co. The hero of Jamestown is the central figure in the story, which is told by a young Englishman. The greater part of the book is filled with an account of the first three years at Jamestown—the hardships, the starvation, sickness and death, the relations with the Indians, the intrigues and conspiracies among the colonists, the explorations, and the first attempts at cultivating the soil. There is plenty of exciting adventure in the course of the story, and the author has managed quite skillfully to keep the main threads of the latter well entangled until they are all cleverly separated at the end.

CROOKED TRAILS AND STRAIGHT. By William MacLeod Raine. 328 Pp. $1.35. G. W. Dillingham & Co. A western story, made up of stirring exploits and exciting events, based upon the bitter enmity existing between the cattlemen and the sheepherders on the Arizona frontier. There is plenty of action, and well regulated periods of suspense, as well as a love story attractively worked out.

THORNEY. By Alexander Black. 206 Pp. $1.25. McBride, Nast & Co. A girl of 18 has been alone on a tropical island for six years, her father having died shortly after they were shipwrecked. There is another shipwreck, and this time it is a young man who is cast ashore. The situation is rather cleverly handled by the author, and the romance ends happily in rescue and return to civilization.

ST. DUNSTON BOY SCOUTS. By Warren L. Eldred. 325 Pp. $1.50. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co. The boys of St. Dunstan's school are types of the best sort of American youth. They become interested in the "Boy Scout" movement and organize a "patrol" at the school. There is work for them of a mysterious and puzzling nature, and they acquit themselves well. In conclusion, they have a very enjoyable week's "hike."

HARPER'S BOOK FOR YOUNG NATURALISTS. By Alpheus Hyatt Verill. 37 Pp. $1.50. Harper & Bros. Written with the aim of helping boy collectors to gather and arrange their collections intelligently, it is difficult to imagine a book more valuable or interesting to every boy. Here are no dry discussions of species, no long technical terms to frighten the boy, but valuable suggestions and directions from actual experience. Taxidermy, trapping, catching and mounting insects, dredging at the seashore—all are explained. Directions are also given for the making of a museum; then follow the divisions devoted to birds and bird nests; insects, fish, reptiles and batrachians, mammals, marine invertebrates, rocks, minerals and fossils, Indian relics and botanical collections. The illustrations are all original and many unique photographs show the subjects in their natural haunts and attitudes.

PRUE'S JOLLY WINTER. By Amy Brooks. 250 Pp. $1. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co. A center of interest is the dancing school with its funny, funny teacher, and the ungraded village day school, with its pupils of all sizes, is amusingly described. A mystery is furnished by the "haunted mill" until it is learned who haunts it, and a more real excitement by the loss of little Prue in a snowstorm that closed the school.

POLLY OF LADY GAY COTTAGE. By Emma C. Dowd. 228 Pp. $1. Houghton, Mifflin company. Those who have had the delight of reading "Polly of the Hospital Staff" will anticipate the pleasure this new book holds in store. It begins with the marriage of Dr. Dudley, the chief physician of the hospital, and Miss Lucy, the head nurse, and their adoption of Polly as their little girl. Polly continues on the hospital staff, but many new and wonderful things happen to her. For one, she finds her "truly relations." They are all one could wish them to be, and while Polly remains loyal to her old friends, events so take their course that every one concerned seems likely to "live happily ever after."

THE TEXAN SCOUTS. By Joseph A. Aitcheler. 325 Pp. $1.35. D. Appleton & Co. This romance centers about one of the most famous episodes in American history, the defense of the Alamo. Ned Fulton is captured by the Mexicans and has several narrow escapes from death. After severe hardships, he and his friends rather the scattered Texas forces for a mighty effort against Santa Anna and the Mexican army. LITTLE POPPY TURVY. By Carlo Frances Warren. 116 Pp. 50 cents. David McKay. Nature lessons are made interesting, and, in fact, delightful, in this little book. Children will find recreation and pleasure in every page. BERT WILSON'S FADEAWAY BABY. —BERT WILSON AT THE WHEEL. By J. W. Duffield. 60 cents. Sully & Klein-telech. Two of the latest and most interesting of the "Bert Wilson series," the first tells how a base ball pennant was won by the mastery pitching of the young recruit, and the second is a story of automobile exploits. Both abound in stirring experiences and exciting adventures.

Miscellaneous. "MISTRESS DAVENANT, THE DARK LADY OF SHAKESPEARE'S SONNETS" by Arthur Acheson. Walter M. Hill, publisher. Mr. Acheson has struck a new note in criticism, dealing with a phase of the Shakespearean controversy somewhat neglected. In this work Mr. Acheson pursues further the idea he advanced in his former work, "Shakespeare and the Rural Poet," and identifies both the patron and the heroine of the sonnets; the patron being Henry, the mistress, Mistress Davenant, landlady of the Crown Inn at Oxford. The line of thought pursued by Mr. Acheson in his critical observations is most interesting.
