rational as the marriage laws? The scriptural church has eugenic principles. Mark, principles, not laws. But literature and life flaunt them. Was the so-called "marriage" of George Eliot and Mr. Lewes, the philosopher, not eugenic from a physical and intellectual viewpoint? Yet the Christian church rightly calls their "marriage" adultery. The medieval heresy making marriage a sacrament has no Biblical warrant. But "marriage an institution of God Himself." as our marriage service puts it, has. Yet modern culture, in literature, drama, art, philosophy, materialistic science and social life scoffs at this faith. On the old Darwinian theory of development-now. Darwinism is not her voice. Christianity, in its true Scriptural form, is the great sugenic force, because it grips conscience and frees it in God. The sugenics of a Christianly enlightened conscience reaches the heart of things. Here sir, is where the church comes to her true function, the church and her stors. Mere external and eugenics solve nothing. Look at the south European and South American countries. Mere state laws solve nothing. finally, for the human heart and will must be reckoned with. Suppose we do obtain a reduction of divorce and chief eugenic ills, what of the venereal horrors mysteriously coursing through the veins of the classes of wealth and society in particular, and often among the common man? What of temperamental and other frailties?

But if the church is to be, as the editorial wishes. a still mightler eugenic power, then the world must listen to the church's eugenical gospel, that cures ain and so can cure the marriage miseries. Then the world must turn away from Bernhard Shaw, Ibsen, Strindberg, Maeterlinck, Nietzsche. It must reject Mrs. Gilman's cold, maternal disdain of motherhood, this furious afraidness of the stock, so characteristic decadent elements of American life today. It will have to refuse, also, Ellen Key's and Margaret Deland's hot unbridling of the love passion under the faise plea of an aparchical idealism which is nothing but the flesh delfied. The Gothe, Wagner, Nietzsche worldview must go! Eugenics, that would-be science of good mating and good birth, will never be a practical science for a sinful humanity, till it takes Christianity and the Christian conscience as its re-
