OMAHA musicians who are spending the summer at the lakes and in the mountains are entertaining the guests at those places in a most gracious manner.

Mrs. Walter Dale, who has a cottage at Glen Elk, Colo., for the summer, was the soloist at a delightful symphony concert given at Lakoside, near Denver, last week. She was given such an enthusiastic reception at that time that Frederick Sweiker of Denver has engaged Mrs. Dale to sing at a concert to be given in that city in September before her return home.

Mrs. Beulah Dale Turner is spending several weeks at Lake Okoboji, and gave a most delightful concert at The Inn Sunday evening. Mrs. Turner sang to a large audience, which included many Omaha people.

Mrs. Wagner Thomas will go to Lincoln Thursday, where she will sing at the Sangerfest. Miss Helen Sadelik will play her accompaniments on that occasion. Miss Sadelik will not return from Lincoln with Mrs. Thomas, but will go to Kearney to spend a month at the home of her grandfather on a farm near that city.

Mr. and Mrs. Freemantel, who leave for Minneapolis the latter part of August, will give a song recital at Happy Hollow Wednesday evening, August 20.

Returns from Michigan.

Miss Lucinda Loomis returned last week from Michigan, where she went to visit Mr. and Mrs. George Thrall at their summer home on Grosse Ile, an island in the Detroit river twenty miles from the city of Detroit. Mr. and Mrs. Thrall are old-time residents of Omaha and were friends of Miss Loomis thirty years ago when she was a teacher at Brownell Hall. Since leaving Omaha Mr. Thrall has been secretary of the Detroit Steel screw works. Miss Loomis given an enthusiastic account of the beauty of Grosse Ile and its homes. The island has an interesting history. It was sold by the Indians to the French and many of the present residents are descendants of the original French settlers and are exceedingly interesting and intelligent. Many city people from Detroit, like the Thralls, also have summer homes there. The island is ten miles long and but one and a half miles wide. A picture of the Thrall home brought back by Miss Loomis shows a large house with extensive screened verandas, surrounded by big trees and facing the river. The main residence street has houses only on one side, as the road skirts the water all around the island. Miss Loomis visited the Country club at Grosse Ile and watched the modern dances. The tango was seemingly in as great favor there as elsewhere.

MINGO TELLS OF THE HOLDUP

Gives His Version of the Way He Was Filled with Shot.

POLICE DOUBT HIS STORY

Admits He Has Been in Trouble Before—Has Wife and Four Children—Is Reported to Have Chance of Recovery.

Lying in his bed at the South Omaha hospital, Tony Mingo, his back and head speckled like a trout with the shot poured into him Sunday night when he was held up and robbed at Twenty-eighth and F streets, told the story of his day's doings. Tony, cool and collected, went over the story of the night and repeatedly asserted that he had been held up by three men and robbed of $70, the savings of many months. Omaha police, it is said, suspect Mingo's statement. The South Omaha police do not take any stock in his holdup story, they say.

Mingo, speaking in pretty fair English, said he lived at No. 221 Pacific street, Omaha, and worked on the street railway tracks. He ate dinner Sunday noon at his home and then having five street car tickets saved up went out for a ride. He says he took a cross-town car to South Omaha and rode for about twenty-five minutes. He says he met an Italian and the two went to a house where they played cards for several hours. About 8 p. m. Tony says he left the place and went walking towards the lake. He says he walked about five blocks and then met three men who spoke in English to him. He tried to get away to go home, but he says the men kept on walking. Tony says they took him near a big bridge and then away into some weeds. He protested, but one man walked on each side of him and the third one behind him. They offered him a drink from a bottle, which he says he refused. The men insisted and Mingo took a drink. He says the men then asked him if he had any money. The three then set upon him and took $70 away from him. He gave up the money, but the men kept talking "bad" to him and he tried to run away. Then he says the gun was fired twice. He lay on the tracks until the Union Stock Yards train crew going to midnight lunch picked him up. The wounded man referred repeatedly to some saloon which he says he passed.

Tony Mingo says he has been in trouble before in Omaha, where he shot a man in an Italian brawl. The shooting was done in self defense and he was cleared. He is married and has a wife and four children. Formerly he worked for Hugh Murphy, but for the last three weeks has been employed as a trackman by the street car company. The man tells a connected story, the only doubtful feature being the presence of the gun, which he says he did not see. The section in which he was found, however, has small shacks in which a gun might be stored.

The wounded man is not in a serious condition, according to the hospital attendants. Mingo says he can find the house and the place where he was shot as soon as he is able to get about. He says the police told him to come and see them when he was able.

Police Captain James Seahan spent considerable time going over the ground and interviewing people living in the neighborhood of the shooting. The fact that Mingo was found near Twenty-eighth and F streets argues that he must have been shot near the new F street viaduct or near the L street viaduct.

GETS OTHER MEN'S SUITS AT TWO DIFFERENT CLEANERS

Two suits of clothes were called for Sunday at two different cleaning establishments by a man to whom they did not belong. One suit, the property of H. A. Scott, 1234 Spruce street, and the other belonging to B. H. Martin, 2014 Farnam street, were respectively taken from the establishments of Sam Hewsky, 128 North Fifteenth, and the French Dry cleaners, 1208 Farnam street. Descriptions of the caller tally and at each place he said he had been asked to get the suit for its owner. His knowledge of the name, the initials, and address precluded close questioning and the loss of the property was not known until the owners later appeared.

SATURN OWNER DISCHARGED

Judge Altstadt Finds He Did Not Sell Liquor in Nebraska.

WAITED TO CROSS THE RIVER

Officers of the Boat Give Their Testimony that No Sales of Liquor Were Made on This Side of the River.

Booth Baughman, half owner of the steamer Saturn, was given a hearing before Judge William Altstadt on the charges of selling liquor without a city license and with violating the 3 o'clock closing law. He was discharged.

Baughman, who was arrested Sunday night when the boat anchored at the foot of Douglas street, was later released on a cash bond of $100, appeared in court with Captain Matthews of the boat and Harry Williams, special boat officer, to testify in defense of their actions.

Williams, who for four years served as deputy game warden, asserted that in accordance with his duties as warden, it was his business to know exactly the state boundary lines. Bringing forth a map he explained that all liquor sold on the boat during the last two nocturnal voyages has been dispensed between a point starting at the foot of Nicholas street and the white lead works, which is entirely Iowa territory. Besides Williams' statements, which was substantiated by the captain, owner and Officers Walker and Smith, Attorney Dickinson, for the defense, brought forward several like cases in the past which have been contested and decided in favor of the defendant.

The Saturn's course had been entirely in Iowa waters from start to finish on the last two voyages, according to the captain, who says the Iowa shore has been hugged so close that several times the vessel has been in danger of going aground. It is now up to the Council Bluffs authorities.

Ice Company Will Not Sell Ice on Run of Other Company

City Building Inspector Brown is wroth at the ice companies and has conferred with John Grant Page, city inspector of weights and measures, and with the mayor, relative to proceedings against at least one company.

Brown says his wife had been securing ice from one company, but owing to late deliveries, decided to take it from another company. When she applied to this second company she was turned down, the driver of the wagon from whom she sought to purchase ice giving her to understand that his company "was not butting in on the other company's customers."

Pegg is looking up the law and may ask the mayor to revoke the license of the company which refused to sell Mrs. Brown the ice when money was offered for it. In case the mayor has no power in the premises, the city legal department will be requested to take some action.
