

Nearing the End

Hundreds of Omaha housekeepers have been benefited by the sacrifice sale of the $40,000.00 Stock Furniture, Carpets and Household Goods in the destructive fire that almost completely destroyed our warehouse on August 17th. We are now nearing the end of our great sale, and what still remains of this large stock has been further reduced in price to assure its immediate disposal.

Damaged by Fire

We Must Clear Out

this damaged stock at once. The money saving opportunities of this unusual sale are without parallel in the history of Omaha.

Will illustrate below a few of the bargains. Space prevents our showing all of them. But the stock includes

Everything to Furnish the Home

Goods Will Be Delivered as Promptly as Circumstances Will Permit

Mahogany, damaged by fire; regular price $25 to $40, fire sale price—
$2.50 to $4.50

Oak and Walnut Dressers, damaged by fire; regular price up to $35, sale price—
$2 to $9

Buffet, like cut, damaged by fire; regular price $24, sale price—
$2.50 to $5

50 Dining room tables, like illustration, damaged by fire, sale price—
$4 to $20

50 handsome corner Chairs, like cut, only slightly smoked. Regular price $4.50, sale price—
$1.98

Dining Room Chairs, damaged by fire—
25c to 50c

All Sales Must Be Final. No Exchanges or Refunds During This Sale.

Note the Size Top 30x48 Inches
Regular price $15, damaged by fire; sale price—
$2.00 to $4.00

Handsome sewing Tables, damaged by fire, sale price—
$6.25

RUBELL'S

1513 and 1515 Howard St.

Saturday the Last Day of our Fall Exposition

Illustrating the very latest Fashion Features in

Women's Fine Wearing Apparel and Dress Accessories

It is a great satisfaction for us to know that this exposition is being thoroughly enjoyed by the women of Omaha, and that they are showing their appreciation of Orkin styles in a most substantial manner is a fact gratifying to us, as we realize that in liberal purchasing we have strongest assurance that our selections are approved.

Oh! Such Lovely Millinery

The talk of the town! Yes, verily. At hundreds of dinner tables tonight will this great millinery exposition be discussed. The hats, matchless in beauty and unrivaled in number will be recalled as the center of a charming picture. Many new and special features will be shown Saturday.

If you wish to know what is new and see how it is worn, visit our great Coat and Suit Department and see the newest creations.

Posed on Professional Living Models

EXHIBITION SATURDAY 10:30 A. M. TO 12:30 P. M., AND 7:00 TO 8:30 P. M.

Special Decorations Throughout the Store

ORKIN BROTHERS

Music by Special String Orchestra

GIFTS SENT TO WHITE HOUSE

Friends Bombard President with Various Favors.

STUFF TO STOCK A MUSEUM

Peculiarities of Bearers of Gifts as Novel as the Articles—Express and Mail Service Utilized.

Thousands of gifts, from millionaire and laboring man, constantly remind President Wilson that, though he is constitutionally precluded from receiving presents from prince, potentate or foreign power, the people of his own country do not forget him. In unending procession the gifts have come. In all sorts of packages grotesque gifts have poured in upon him. A staff of clerks at the White House spend no small part of each day in properly receiving and acknowledging them and, perchance, returning them with thanks.

The stream of gifts to the new president started on the day of his induction into office. It will continue with more or less intermittency until the day he orders to be president of the United States. The gifts are marked by a catholicity of choice that is truly amazing.

These unknown friends of the chief executive do not confine the mediums by which the gifts are sent to any one carrier; in fact, the methods chosen to send them, large and small, are almost as varied as is possible.

Visitors with suspicious-looking bulges about their clothing have been stopped on the White House grounds by the police or secret service men. They have been taken to one side for examination and a harmless article has been taken from its hiding place within their clothing. On questioning, they have admitted it was intended as a gift to the president. They usually drop the fact that they were attempting to reach the president through some pretext in order to deliver it themselves and personally receive the thanks of the chief executive.

If the distance is too great for the giver to reach Washington—or if he has no acquaintance here, or if he cannot prevail upon his congressman to present the gift for him—it will be reluctantly trusted to the tender mercy of the express companies or the mails. During the present administration the favorite method of sending the smaller articles to the White House has been by parcel post. Larger packages from unknown senders are always opened at a safe distance from the executive rooms to provide against unpleasant possibilities.

Stream of Curious Things.
The nature of the gifts varies in such a way that the president might possess a good start toward collecting a museum of curiosities or even establishing a zoological park. Pamphlets and books enough to furnish a good-sized library accumulate every few weeks. Just for variety a mud turtle sent by admirers on the eastern shore of Maryland was found, carefully wrapped, in the morning's mail one day not long ago. The reptile had not been harmed in any way and was immediately turned loose in the expanse of the White House grounds, where he may thrive for many years. A vast number of pamphlets are received, many of them autographed by the authors. They deal with every subject under the sun, from giving succor for animal detempered to furnishing a cure for all social and political evils, the same being duly guaranteed by the author. It is remarked by the force at the White House that many of the pamphlets have been printed at the expense of the authors, which fact is regarded as being significant.

Photographs also form a goodly burden in the mail of the chief executive. They are sent with the understanding that they are to be kept and treasured by him. Most of them are autographed, and if the photograph is a group picture the names of the persons are duly inscribed on the back. The sending of photographs of large families, started in a previous administration, still continues, and the new president was greeted with an array of likenesses that plainly indicated race suicide was not imminent, at least in many quarters.

Secretary Tumulty, on account of the size of his family, also is favored with a number of photographs of family groups. There is a great deal of human interest in a large family, and it must be admitted that these photographs receive much scrutiny at the White House.

Bibles come in large numbers. Many of the books received are valuable, some of them being highly prized by the president, who is notably a lover of books. But the vast majority of them are stored in the White House attic, where they will remain until final disposition is made of them.

The stories printed concerning the prowess of the president as a bicyclist caused his mails to be temporarily flooded with books upon that sport, with no small number of advertisements of different makes of wheels in their wake. Golf books and golf balls are commonly received.

better use than could the nation's chief executive.

Following the fixed policy at the White House, if any gift seems to have any intrinsic value, or if it is money, it is promptly returned to the sender, as the president refuses to receive contributions that obviously possess particular value.

Nor will the president want for canes or umbrellas—that is, if he will but toss some of a number sent him. The most unique idea in the way of a cane was one sent from a small town in California. The enterprising aspirant for the post-office appointment in the town—in order to get ahead of the opposition—conceived the idea of sending his request with a cane. So an elaborate stick was made of vari-colored walnut woods. The head was hollowed, and with the cane came a note to the president asking him to unscrew the head of the walking stick and find therein the name of the proper candidate for the place.

Should President Wilson ever decide to start a museum he would have some real curios with which to begin. Recently he received a piece of cannon ball found in the streets of Norfolk, Va., the donor stating that the shell was a part of the farewell shot sent by a British soldier when Virginia was evacuated by the British.

Other curios received are pieces of wood from historic buildings and from old vessels. Many times these relics are sent him by societies that object to the buildings being torn down, or to the ships being destroyed. And with them comes a request for him to exert his influence in saving the relic for future generations. He recently received a piece of lace made from wood, laboriously cut by hand from a large block, and a nicely embroidered doily.

The present administration will have splendid luck, and every success, if the immense numbers of four-leafed clovers sent in please anything. Flowers of all varieties are received at the White House. In many cases they are not properly packed and, consequently, are badly withered. A large bunch of violets, sent from a southern state, however, was so well preserved that it served to brighten the White House offices for some time.

is well known at the White House, where numerous packages of them are received, usually in dozen lots. The eggs carry in good shape, although it is doubted whether Mr. Wilson ever breakfasts on them. Considerable real maple sugar from the New England states has been received, some of which, it is said about the executive offices, found its way to the White House table.

The champion cheesemaker of each section of the country is constantly enriching the White House collection with contributions of prize varieties. Butter makers come in for a letter of thanks when they forward to the president a pound or two of their best product, while the champion breadmakers from different parts of the country have gone so far as to offer to go into the White House kitchens and show by actual demonstration that the loaf forwarded from an Iowa or a Maine kitchen is genuine.

Although it is too early for the various fairs over the country to be sending in the prize pumpkins, corn and other farm products, yet prize apples and other fruits already have reached the White House from southern states, some very good vegetables from Texas being a recent consignment.

On the same day came a couple of sweaters from Massachusetts and a box of cigars from the Philippine Islands. Chewing gum sent from well known factories would be sufficient to furnish diversion to the entire presidential family, should it so desire.

As soon as it was announced that no wine was to be served at the Wilson table, numerous letters poured in upon the president, and a good many gifts. One of them was a quart of orange marmalade, which was placed in whiskey glasses, the donor naively remarking that it was the best use to which the glasses could be put.

Just to keep the matter from getting monotonous, a pin cushion was received from a little girl who said that she was a cripple and was kept indoors a great deal; she hoped he would appreciate the cushion, which she had made herself.

White House would eventually become a storage house. Hence, they must be disposed of as fast as practical. Many of the books and maps have a read value, and are forwarded to the proper department or to the library of congress. Others are worthless and promptly consigned to the furnace. A very, very few are kept—Washington Star.

SOULFUL SOB FOR CHANGE

Bank President's Plaintive Plea for the Cashier's Fat Job.

"Mr. Smithly," said the bank president as he called the cashier into his private office and motioned him to be seated. "I want to ask you a few questions. Is it true that you have purchased a home at a cost of $35,000?"
"I—I have, sir," replied the cashier as he turned pale.
"And that you own an automobile worth $5,000?"
"Y—yes, sir."
"And a yacht worth $7,000?"
"Yes—yes, sir."
"And three race horses valued at $15,000?"
"I—do, sir."
"And a dog worth $2,000?"
"Yes—yes, sir."
"And you sometimes lose vast sums at poker?"
"Y—yes, sir."
"And live at the rate of $50,000 a year?"
"Pretty near that, sir."

"Mr. Smithly," continued the bank president, as he lowered his voice. "I want to ask you a favor. Your salary is $2,000 a year, is it not?"
"It is, sir," replied the cashier as he arose from his chair and sighed and wiped the perspiration from his forehead.
"I—I suppose I am to hand in my resignation at once, sir?"
"Not at all, my boy—not at all! I want to ask you if you want to change jobs with me for a few years. I don't seem to be able to make much headway in this institution on my mealy salary of $20,000 a year."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

FINED FOR TRYING TO SELL DECAYED FRUIT

Jugene C. Kemble assistant state food inspector, brought Trimble Bros., commission men into court for trying to sell decayed fruit at their establishment. C. G. Trimble appeared for the first and pleaded guilty with the result that he was fined $10 and costs.

Hooray! Blood Free of Impurities

Eczema Gone! Acne, Tetter, Rash, Pimples, Carbuncles, Boils—Banished!

The under layer of skin is a fine network of tiny blood vessels in which the famous blood remedy, S. S. S., works with remarkable activity. This is why S. S. S., the best known blood purifier, has such a positive action in the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from this fine network of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Under the influence of S. S. S. this fine network of blood vessels in the skin is constantly taking from the blood the nutrition required for healthy tissue, and the cause of disease is just as constantly becoming removed, scattered and rendered harmless. These facts are more fully explained in a book on skin troubles, sent by The Swift Specific Co., 136 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. Get a bottle to-day and banish all skin afflictions.

Key to the Situation—See Advertising.