

WOMAN KEEPS A DATE BOOK

List of Names of Well Known Men is Read in Open Court.

WOMAN DENIES INTIMACY

Miss Lucille Prescott, Former Maid in the Peyton Home, is Asked on Witness Stand as to Relations with Them.

When Lucille Prescott, former maid in the Lacey E. Peyton home, was confronted with a copy of a list of names of men, some of whom are well known in Omaha, compiled by her several years ago, and required to say on her oath whether she had been intimate with the men as they were named one by one, a climax was reached in the Lacey E. Peyton $40,000 suit against Hugh W. Williams for alleged alienation of the affections of his wife never surpassed in the most sensational melodrama.

The young woman, who gave her age as 25 years, was put through an ordeal which finally caused her to break into tears. After a battle desperately fought by opposing lawyers, Judge Day ruled that the questions asked by the defense were competent for impeaching the character of the witness.

Roll is Called.

The names were called one by one. To each question whether she had been intimate with the men named, she answered "No," until the tenth name was called. Then she hung her head and declined to answer. Insistence caused her to break into tears and a short recess of court was taken. Judge Day then advised her that she might decline to answer only on the ground that she might incriminate herself by doing so.

When the name was called again she whispered that an answer might incriminate her and that she refused to answer on that ground. She made a similar response when half a dozen other names were called and in other instances made denials. When first names were not given she insisted that she did not know who was referred to.

The court room was crowded. From the time the first witness, Miss Ruth Geddes, testified that she had been hired by Lucille Prescott and Lacey E. Peyton to perform herself in a deposition taken in Sioux City the testimony has been replete with statements of interest to sensation-seekers and the number of spectators has increased daily.

Employed as Maid.

Miss Prescott on direct examination testified that Hugh W. Williams, well-to-do boiler maker, had been often at the Peyton home in the absence of Mr. Peyton, saying that while employed as a maid by Mrs. Peyton she had witnessed Mr. Williams' visits.

Attorneys for Williams sought to show that Miss Prescott's character was immoral; that she had been too friendly with Mr. Peyton; that she had an interest in testifying in Mr. Peyton's behalf, and that she had induced Miss Geddes to give false testimony.

The original list of names was in a small book which Miss Prescott accidentally left at the Peyton home, which Mrs. Peyton gained possession. When Miss Prescott testified for Mr. Peyton in a divorce suit, which was thrown out of court by Judge Kennedy on the ground that neither party had clean hands, this same list showed up.

Thinks Water Board Will Change Ruling on Bill Guarantees

Harry Tuloy, at the meeting of the Real Estate exchange at noon, expressed the belief that the Water board would come to a satisfactory agreement with the exchange within a week on the matter of requiring the owner of property to guarantee the payment of the water bills of the tenants. The exchange is trying to get the board to back down on this ruling. Other members of the exchange were not so hopeful that the board would give in so easy.

Edwin S. Jewell, manager of the City National Bank building, spoke on the office building situation, saying that now-a-days half the sum paid for rent in office buildings is not really rent for space and room rent, but is paid for the service that goes with it. He went back to the little office rooms above the grocery stores in the small town, saying that there where the tenant splits his own kindling in the hall, does his own sweeping, provides his own soap and sponges, and looks after a hundred other little details that make for his convenience and comfort, the fee he pays monthly can be called "rent," but the modern hotel gives little more for the rent in charges for rooms than does the modern office building.

WRIST BADLY CUT AS MAN WARDS OFF INJURY TO GIRL

W. Kenmore, barber, Thirteenth and Davenport streets, suffered a severe cut in one of his wrists when he attempted to save a little girl from being injured by a broken plate glass window. He was standing in front of his shop when one of three youngsters jumped sideways and broke the heavy glass. Kenmore reached out to catch her when he received his wound. Police Surgeon Miller attended Kenmore and took a number of stitches to sew up the cut.
