APPAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Police Board Wants Ordinance Regulating Disorderly Houses. COVER ALBERT LAW DEFECTS Say Present Rule in Some Cases is Too Hard on Saloon Keepers or Too Ambiguous.

South Omaha is to have a little more legislation along the line of the Omaha saloon regulations. If the plans of Mayor Hector and the police board count, the newest law is what is termed a disorderly house ordinance. The disorderly house ordinance is supposed to be aimed at those arrested in a saloon after hours when such things occur in South Omaha. It is also supposed to cover any little deviations from the strict interpretation of the Albert law.

One of the board's members some time ago complained that because of a lack of a disorderly house ordinance no conviction could be gotten against a saloon-keeper charged with violation of the liquor laws. Under the proposed ordinance all those caught drinking beer in a saloon after hours would be charged with being inmates of a disorderly house.

Time at Play Very Well Spent, Says the Play Expert

"Recreation of the right kind, is a world as well as a country problem," said Charles F. Weller of New York, secretary of the Playground and Recreation Association of America, at the meeting of the civic committee and social science department of the Omaha Woman's club Thursday afternoon. The teachers of the Omaha public schools were the special guests and the club room at Metropolitan hall was taxed to its greatest seating capacity. He said that the time was fast approaching when play would be as much a factor in the program of the public schools as the three "R's."

Mayor Hector yesterday issued a special call for the city council to meet in committee to "talk over some matters of special import."

It is understood that several of the councilmen in the outer wards want a re-districting of the electric arc lights about the city. Councilman Henry Hartnett, whose ward is in the southwest section of the city, is fighting to have a few more lights in his ward. Hartnett's ward is composed of many poor workmen and women who have to go home late at night. The police are spread about the business section of the city and, unless called specially, afford little protection in the outskirts of the city, so Hartnett wants more light for his ward.

WEEKLY DEBATES ARE PLANNED AT CREIGHTON

The Creighton Oratorical association composed of aspiring orators from the college department of the Creighton Art-culture, has organized for work and will hold a series of weekly debates, one each Wednesday evening. Prof. Isaac Bossett of the faculty is acting as moderator of the society and the following officers have been elected for the first semester: vice president, Harry Sullivan, class '14; president, Emil Svoboda, class '15; recording secretary, Raymond Traynor, class '15; corresponding secretary, Frank McDermott, class '14; treasurer, Edward McDermott, class '14. Committee on programs, Messrs. Walter Coakley and John Cordes.
