SALUTING THE CLOCK'S FACE

"Two young men in the store where I work got fired today," said the new boarder. "The boss told them they spent too much time watching the clock."

"I hope it will be a lesson to them," commented the landlady. "In these bustling times young men who wish to succeed must take an enthusiastic interest in their work."

"It's evident that you have been reading one of the uplift magazines, Mrs. Jiggers," remarked the star boarder. "A woman of your intellectual equipment should be ashamed to retail such platitudes. My sympathy is with the young men who were discharged."

"I contend that people who are foolish enough to work deserve whatever happens to them. But I try to be fair and just, Mrs. Jiggers. I try to see things from their point of view. It is really some of us that must work. We can't all deal in gold bricks and brass watches. But people who must work, because of conditions they cannot control, should do as little as possible for the money they draw."

"These young men who were fired held the same theory, and there are too many foolishly indolent people everywhere. If all the workers were determined to watch the clock and do as much as a possible work would become a popular institution."

"To make clear my meaning Mrs. Jiggers, I must dig into the dead, dim past. When I was a young man I worked in a hardware store as a clerk. There were four of us there employed and three of us took the rational view. It was impossible for us to become zealous over the hardware business. There is nothing less romantic than weighing nails and wrapping up awls in brown manila paper."

"Every store in town had clerks similarly oppressed. Not for us the base-ball games or the horse races or anything that made life worth living. We had to stay in the store and wait on tireless people who would haggle for three hours over a cent when the bleachers were calling us. I can't understand how any clerk can be enthusiastic over this matter of buying and selling, when he must realize how much he is sacrificing."

"So the three of us watched the clock. We were always suffering to hear the evening whistle which released us from our drudgery. The fourth clerk was one of those painful young men who wish to get ahead in the world. His activity was perfectly disgusting. He was the first to leave at night and I don't suppose he consulted the clock once in a year."

"He was a disturbing influence from the first. He set a false and impossible standard. Before long our employer began expressing a wish that he had more clerks like Clarence. He had the impudence to tell the three of us, to our faces, that Clarence was worth more in an hour than we were in a week."

"Pretty soon one of the three was let out to make room for another young man like Clarence. Then a second had to go. One by one the roses fell, my dear Mrs. Jiggers, and at last I was obliged to take my hat and celluloid collar and go, making place for a fourth Clarence. My employer told me I was too fond of watching the clock."

"The three of us, having been discharged, held an indignation meeting, decided to live without working, since work called for superhuman sacrifices and the suppression of every human instinct and ambition. I am proud to say that we all adhered to our resolution."

"Since that period we have watched the clock accordingly to the dictates of our own conscience, none daring to make us afraid. We may not be as materially prosperous as the Clarences of commerce, but we retain our self-respect and independence."

"And now, Mrs. Jiggers, do my eyes deceive me, or is that observant eye before me?"—Walt Mason in the Chicago News.

Alamito Milk and Cream

Are the Favorite Choice of Mr. and Mrs. Jack

The first day that Mrs. Jack started housekeeping she discovered that the most essential things needed in her kitchen were pure milk, cream and butter, and following in the footsteps of her very particular mother, she at once phoned Douglas 411 and told the ALAMITO SANITARY DAIRY to have their wagon stop every morning.

At breakfast the second day Mr. Jack said, "dear, where did you get this delicious cream we have this morning?" "Why, I got it from The ALAMITO, of course," she said, "because mother has gotten milk, cream, and, in fact, all of their absolutely pure products for a number of years and has found them to be the best the market offers. That cream you have in your coffee is The ALAMITO'S JERSEY CREAM and it is always as sweet and pure as it is today."

"Well," said Mr. Jack, "it is the best I ever tasted and you surely have shown good judgment in selecting The ALAMITO from whom to get your dairy products."

Why not enjoy pure food products as do Mr. and Mrs. Jack by having The ALAMITO deliver their sanitary dairy products to you fresh every day?

MR. JACK:
"You haven't told me, Jaqueline, why you selected the Knabe Player Piano at Hayden's? I am certainly glad you did, because every day some one tells me what a great Player Hayden's sell him, and insists upon our coming up to hear it; now our friends will have to come to us, won't they?"
MRS. JACK:
"Well, dearie, it was so easy. You know we have been reading their advertisements and I have seen so many of the Knabe Pianos at our friends' homes, that, of course, I went right there, and, dear, you ought to see their complete line—it is the greatest display in the city. Over two hundred and fifty pianos to select from. I selected this Player-Piano because of its beautiful tone quality and simplicity of operation, any one can learn to operate it intelligently in ten minutes—you could not have given men anythig to please me better."
MR. JACK:
"Oh, no, the pleasure is mine. We now have a Piano that I can set down to and play a piece LIKE I WANT TO HEAR IT PLAYED."
