PRICE OF LIVER IS WAY UP

No Longer is it "Thrown In for the Cat" by the Butcher.

DEMAND FOR CHEAPER CUTS

Better Cuts Cost So Much that Too Many Asked for the Other Parts and Forced Up the Price.

A popular hue and cry against an intolerable condition has been given a new variation. It is probable that the man you heard yesterday of the day before calling against the "high cost" of something was not, after all, indulging in generalities. It may have sounded as though he were complaining of the "high cost of living," whereas, as a matter of fact, it is more than likely that he was deploring the "high cost of liver." Of course, the two amount to very much the same thing, because it is generally conceded that, in these days when porters and strikers are but lingering memories to many, liver is a considerable factor in the matter of living.

John Smith and Henry Jones, who are still driving teams for little more than they were getting a few years ago, recall the time, from five to ten years ago, when, on their way home from work, they used to drop in at a meat market, slip down from 35 to 40 cents on the counter, and order a couple pounds of good steak. Some times before leaving the butcher shop they would say, as an afterthought, "Oh, and you 'throw in' a hunk of liver for the cat."

That—the time is emphasized—was from five to ten years ago. Today the same Messrs. Smith and Jones still patronize the same meat markets. Everything looks about the same. The fixtures of the market are not much more elaborate than they were a decade ago, the service has not been improved upon to any appreciable extent, and the meats are not any more tempting than they were in those other days.

But things have changed, the chief result being that Smith and Jones no longer order steaks. Instead of asking to have a "hunk thrown in," they prepare to pay a pound or two. If they are in a wantonly extravagant mood, they order calf's liver, "the porterhouse of liverdom." For this they are required to pay 25 cents a pound, more than they paid for the best steak in the years gone by. And they buy it with more care than they were wont to select the more choice meats. They punch it and pinch it to make sure that "common beef liver" is not being foisted upon them. Beef liver ranges in price from 10 to 12 cents a pound.

It is well known that all meats have greatly advanced in price in recent years, but it is a notable fact that the less choice cuts have gone up out of proportion to the general increase in the price of meat. This is explained by the fact that the soaring in prices of choice meats has created an abnormal demand for liver and other "cheap" meats.

"Why, I recognize every day," said O. W. Nelson, meat buyer for the Hayden department store, "the faces of men and women who used to buy the best steaks here seven or eight years ago, while today they order liver or rib boiling meat. They are now content to eat the meat at which they 'turned up their noses' a few years ago. We used to give away beef liver when it was asked for in those days, and choice calf liver sold for 10 cents a pound, sometimes three pounds for a quarter. Round steak used to sell for 10 cents a pound; now we get from 12 to 15 cents a pound for it. The price of chops has shown about the same increase."

Harry Cune, meat buyer for Fourtours & Co., and W. K. Butts, who has a meat market at Twentieth and Parnassus streets, agree with the Hayden meat buyer in his explanation of the cause of the increased prices of erstwhile cheap meats.

HUMMEL BOOSTERS ARE BOOSTING JOE HUMMEL

An organization calling itself the Hummel Republican Boosters has held a meeting and adopted resolutions commending the work performed by City Commissioner Hummel. Mr. Hummel was at the meeting and told what had been done at Hanscom park and Carter lake looking to the providing of playgrounds for the children. He added that the carrying out of his plans had been hampered by reason of a lack of funds.

CHESTER A. GARDNER, WELL KNOWN AMONG FANS, DEAD

Chester A. Gardner, son of a former mayor of Oakland, Ia., and well known here among the fans, died yesterday in the Omaha General hospital from alcoholic poisoning.

His body will be taken to Oakland, where the funeral will be held Sunday afternoon.

Gardner was about 21 years old and for the last eight years was prominent both here and in Council Bluffs.

Dakotan Acquitted of Slave Charge is Given Banquet

HURON, S. D. Nov. 8.—(Special).—When Donald Montgomery and a number of people from here, among them Rev. and Mrs. G. Richmond and daughter, who were called to Sioux City as witnesses in the case against Montgomery, under the white slave act, reached home last evening, a delegation of about 300 men and women of this city met them at the train.

The principals in the case received the congratulations of many friends and were taken by them to the Grover luncheonette where they were guests of honor at an impromptu banquet. The affair was arranged when about noon word of the dismissal of the case reached Huron. Speeches were made during the evening by the various friends of Montgomery and Rev. Mr. Richmond and family.

The dismissal of the case ends a sensational matter that has kept this community in a perturbed condition for several months and has divided the Methodist church into factions, feeling being so intense that it will require some considerable time to restore the normal status within the church and the community.

LIEN LAWS ARE TO BE DISCUSSED BY BUILDERS

The lien laws of the state in their relation to the building contractors and material men are to be discussed at the next meeting of the Builders' exchange, Tuesday evening, November 11, at 8 o'clock. Attorney Frank L. McCoy will lead the round table talk on the matter. The present lien laws of the state affect the members differently, according to the particular line of business in which they are engaged. Some members, it is said, are in favor of requiring the merchants to notify owners or general contractors when material is delivered, while others are said to favor the repeal of the law entirely. Other matters of importance to the exchange may come up at this meeting.
