UNCLE SAM ITS BEST FRIEND

Such is Verdict of Commander Godo of the Japanese Navy.

SPENDS LITTLE TIME IN OMAHA

Together with other Nippon Officials He is Completing Tour of the World and Stops Over Between Trains.

"This talk of war between Japan and the United States is simply what you Americans would call the worst kind of rot," said Commander T. Godo of the Japanese navy, who in company with Commander K. Masui and Lieutenant Miyasaka, went west Friday morning on Northwestern-Union Pacific No. 8, en route home from what is practically the last lap on a twenty-eight month tour of the world.

The three Japanese naval officers sail from San Francisco early next week and upon their return home they will submit their official report to the war department of Japan.

When the Japanese naval officers left home, they bore the commission of their government that instructed them to go abroad and make observations relative to what other countries are doing in the way of internal improvements. They went to France, Germany, Italy, Norway and Sweden and for the last four months have been in the United States, visiting Washington, New York, Boston and some of the other eastern cities.

All three of the distinguished Japanese in the city this morning speak very good English, having been graduated from the University of Japan. Commander Godo having subsequently taken a post graduate course in England, where he studied three years, completing his education there ten years ago. This was the first trip that any of them had ever made to the United States.

Nothing to the Russian. As spokesman for the party, Commander Godo said:

"There is nothing to this talk of Japan having a desire to sever the friendly relations with the United States. We look upon and feel that the United States is our best friend and one that we can depend upon in the future.

"In our country there is an element that is continually talking war and these reports that there might be a possibility of friction between our country and the United States comes from this class. With us they are regarded as the unpatriotic and their opinion counts for little. The masses, and particularly the men who control the government and make up the best elements of society, are not raising their voices for war. We want to be at peace with the world."

Would Be a Spectator.

Asked what position Japan might take in the Mexican situation in event the United States should intervene and be forced to do some fighting, Commander Godo shrugged his shoulders and remarked:

"Absolutely nothing. It would not be our fight and we would simply be a spectator, watching the outcome."

It was suggested that Japan had sent a warship into Mexico waters along the west coast of the republic. "Yes," replied the commander, "that is true, but it has been sent there to aid in the protection of Japanese subjects in the event protection should be needed at any time. We don't look upon this Mexican situation as anything that concerns us. We feel that the United States will take care of affairs down there and we are simply looking on the same as England, Germany and the other nations."

In a Closed Chapter.

Speaking of the California legislation excluding the Japanese from owning and holding real estate in the states along the Pacific coast, Commander Godo remarked:

"That chapter is closed and we are going to make the most of the legislation that has been enacted. While we feel that perhaps we have not been as well treated as some other nations, we propose to submit, and by educating our people, in time prove to the world, and the United States in particular, that the Japanese are worthy of confidence and citizens of which any country might be proud.

"Japan is developing rapidly under the present government and during the peace that has followed the war with Russia, we have made wonderful strides. Our country is prosperous and many new industries patterned after those of the United States have been developed.

"Say to the world that Japan is a peace-loving country and that the majority of its people are for peace, though, when we are aroused to the fighting pitch, we fight, and fight hard. You may add, though, that no matter how hard we might be pressed, the United States is the last nation that we would raise a hand against."

Tells Students to Lead Clean Lives

Dr. Exner, special lecturer for the International Young Men's Christian Association, addressed the male students at the University of Omaha Friday noon on sex hygiene. Dr. Exner spoke in a clear manner, making himself well understood.

In his speech he appealed to the students to lead a clean life, emphasizing the need for morality among the people of the present day. Continuing in his talk Dr. Exner said 80 per cent of the girls that go wrong are those that are led astray. These girls are but the victims of those men that know they are doing a wrong in encouraging women to a life of shame.

Continuing in his talk he said that the women have not as fair a chance in life as the men have and as an analogy he brought in the story of a hunter who sets his trap by some spring in the dry season, well knowing that the animals would come for water. It is in this same manner he compared young men who try to ensnare girls.

TWO TRAINLOADS OF BUICKS FOR THE COAST

About the largest consignment of automobiles that ever went west passed through Omaha Thursday night when the Rock Island carried 100 carloads of Buick machines to California. They were carried on two trains and aggregated 300 machines.

The coat sale of the season. Up to $19.00 values for $10.00; up to $30.00 values for $15.00.
