

CORN RECEIPTS ARE HEAVY

Omaha Again Leads All Other Markets of the Entire World.

IS VERY QUICKLY DISPOSED OF

Big Demand for Corn as Soon as it Reaches the Exchange—New Markets Are Here for Grain.

In corn receipts Omaha again Monday topped the markets of the world there having been carloads on change, as against 253 at Chicago, eighty, at St. Louis and 139 at Kansas City. In total grain receipts Omaha leads any of the markets named, the carloads of all kinds of grain totaling up as follows:

Table with 3 columns: Grain type, Quantity, Price. Includes Wheat, Corn, Oats, Total.

Winnipeg and Duluth had more wheat than any of the markets included in the foregoing table, but they were entirely without corn.

The receipts on sale included the grains received over Sunday, but this was true at the other markets, so that in this matter Omaha had no advantage over the other points.

The corn was quickly disposed of and before noon the last car had been sold, every bushel, almost, having been bought by parties representing mills and big consuming concerns in the south and west.

Several buyers, who have not been seen in Omaha, were here, taking long lines for both current and future deliveries in anticipation of higher prices on corn, because the new crop is on the market next year.

Not only corn, but the Nebraska wheat was in good demand for shipment to faraway points. There was one man on the market taking wheat for a big mill in Los Angeles and another representing a large mill located in Texas.

KING DIVORCE CASE IN COURT

Trial in Which Both Seek Separation is Under Way.

HEARING BEFORE JUDGE TROUP

Mrs. King on the Witness Stand Tells of the Treatment Accorded Her by Husband on Wedding Trip.

Words and actions of two mothers-in-law enter largely into the evidence introduced before District Judge Troup in a suit through which Leslie L. King, manager of the Omaha Wool and Storage company, and Mrs. Dorothy A. King, who were married a little more than a year ago, are seeking legal separation.

The wedding occurred at Harvard, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, and was a notable social event. A son was born to the couple last July and soon afterward Mrs. King returned to her father's home.

Last July Mr. King secured a restraining order forbidding his wife's mother, Mrs. Levi A. Gardner, to stay at his home or to induce his wife to leave home. Before the court's order became effective Mrs. King and Mrs. Gardner left for Chicago. Mr. King alleged that his mother-in-law was the only cause of trouble between himself and his wife.

Mrs. King on the witness stand testified that on September 7, 1912, after the wedding ceremony, Mr. King's mother refused to say goodbye to her and asserted that she did not like her son's bride. Mrs. King said that her mother-in-law treated her unkindly at the King home at Thirty-second street and Woodworth avenue, although she was not living there by her own desire. She said the elder Mrs. King told Leslie L. King that a man had asked his wife to have luncheon with him and that her mother-in-law refused for days to speak to her or eat at the same table with her. She testified that her husband's father always had treated her kindly.

Although Leslie L. King first brought the divorce action, the case is being tried on Mrs. King's cross-petition because he has failed to pay her $2 a month alimony, as ordered by the court. Mrs. King testified that on her wedding trip to the western coast her husband struck and kicked her at night and slapped her in the face.

"On our way from Portland to Los Angeles we had a sleeping berth," she said. "I was awakened by a third at my back. I waited a little and there came another. I found that he was sitting up in bed and striking me. I turned over and he then accused me of hitting him with a pillow and kicked me."

She asserted that at a hotel in Portland, Ore., Mr. King accused her of nodding to a man and slapped her in the face. She said that she had nodded goodbye to a woman friend, who was leaving the hotel.

Poppleton Leaves Property to Wife and His Young Son. The will of William S. Poppleton, who shot himself the afternoon of November 15 with a revolver, which he had been examining at his office, leaves all his property to his wife, Mrs. Helen Poppleton, and his 4-year-old son, William S. Poppleton, Jr., according to unofficial information from the probate court by Myron L. Learned, brother-in-law of the dead man.

Courts to Decide Between the Water Board and Exchange. Chairman Harry Tukey of the committee of the Real Estate exchange, which has been conferring with the Board of Directors of the Metropolitan water district over the board's rulings requiring landlords to guarantee tenants' water bills has declared all negotiations off and "will let the courts decide the matter."

MEYERS FINDS BURGLAR IN HIS ROOM AT THE COLONIAL. Edward Meyers, residing at the Colonial apartments, Thirty-eighth and Farmington streets, was awakened about 5 o'clock yesterday morning by the sound of someone moving about in his room. Between his bed and the window he could distinguish the figure of a man and leaping from the covers grappled with the intruder.
