

TO IMPROVE MILLING WHEAT

Iowa Millers to Import and Distribute New Seed Grain.

NEBRASKA IS TO DO LIKEWISE

Flour Manufacturers in This State Also Plan to Assist Farmers in Bettering Quality of the Cereal.

A nation-wide movement to improve the quality of milling wheat in the United States is signified by the decision of the Iowa Millers' club, meeting at the Hawshaw, in that it is to import upwards of 2,000 bushels of Marquis seed wheat from Canada, and distribute it among Iowa millers for spring sowing.

This proposed order of 2,000 bushels is only the start of what the club believe to be a great step forward in the milling and wheat growing industry.

According to millers who have investigated the new variety of wheat, it is better than either red fife or blue stem wheat, because the head is heavier, the straw is shorter, and it ripens at least ten days earlier than any other spring wheat.

The meeting at the Hawshaw is a district gathering of members of the Iowa Millers' club, which has headquarters at Des Moines.

The question of flour bleaching was not considered at the meeting, and is not a topic of moment among millers of Iowa and Nebraska, according to officers of the club.
