He said that Houston was making good use of the advantage accruing from such a system (in that it was advertising with the slogan, "Bring your wealth and energy to Houston. It is unassessable.

Frank G. Odell gave an illustration of a piece of vacant ground in the heart of Portland, Ore. The ground, he said, had been bought by the present owner some years ago for $3,000. The owner had just refused $2,250,000 for the ground, the offer coming from a concern that wanted to build a $5,000,000 skyscraper on it. At the moment he refused that offer 40 per cent of the men in Portland were said to be out of work. "By refusing that offer," said Odell, "that man was not only holding it for still greater profits, but he was preventing the expenditure of an additional $5,000,000 in the city, which would have given employment to a vast army of the idle men of the city."

City Legal Heads Study Over State Liquor Statutes

City Corporation Counsel Ben S. Baker, Assistant City Attorney Louis J. TePoel and City Attorney John A. Rine, with the law spread out before them in Judge Baker's office, held a prolonged conferonce yesterday relative to the opinion the city legal department will render interpreting the liquor license law as it applies to wholesulers and retailers. Police Commissioner J. J. Ryder has Intimated that he will not permit "barrel houses" and wholesalers to sell over a counter without a retailer's license. To this Mayor Dahlman has indicated that he is strenuously opposed, because the practice, presumably contrary to or an evasion of the law, has been permitted in the past,

The question the city legal department will be asked to answer is whether or not a "barrel house" may under the law sell liquor over a counter at retail even with a retailer's license. There is a statute which has been interpreted to mean that anybody interested in any wholesale liquor business cannot legally be engaged or interested in a retail liquor business. The matter of determining whether or not such an interest exists is This latter law has been evaded by the owners of a wholesale or "barrel houses that where the identity of the two licenses can be established the council
