What Really Happened in Jury Room; Testimony of Those Who Were There

CONDENSED TESTIMONY OF JUROR J. A. MCCARTHY. Examination by Judge Baker: Q—Mr. McCarthy, you were a juror in the case of Cadot Taylor against The Bee Publishing company and Victor Rosewater? A—Yes, sir. Q—Do you remember the juror, Gard? A—Yes, sir. Q—Did he not, within two or three days after the jury was impaneled, state to you that Taylor should have a verdict for $10,000? A—Yes, sir. Q—At the same time, after the question I stated before, concerning the amount of damages Gard claimed should be awarded to Taylor, didn't you say to him, in substance, that until all the evidence was in in the case, and the jurors had had all the evidence, no determination of the question as to Taylor's rights to recover, or what he should receive, should be made? A—Yes, sir. Q—During the trial, after Mr. Bromie had been walking back and forth in front of the jurors, did you say to Gard: "Does Bromie act that way all the time, and did Gard say to you, 'Yes,' and didn't he further say, referring to Bromie, that he walked that way in his office, that he was a nervous man, and he was that way at all times, and always did that, or words to that effect? A—Yes, sir. Q—After the jury retired, did Gard state in the presence of the other jurors, including yourself, that he favored allowing the plaintiff, Taylor, $5,000, and would stay there forty-eight hours if necessary to get him the damages? A—Yes, sir. Q—State whether, during the deliberations of the jury, you had a conversation with Gard in the toilet room? A—Yes, sir. Q—Was not the name of Attorney Bromie mentioned, and in that connection did Gard not state to you that Bromie had a case for him at one time in justice court, in which a party by the name of Dr. Impey had sued him? A—Yes, sir. Q—In that conversation did he state that in the examination of jurors, that Connell had skipped him in asking questions with reference to his knowledge or acquaintance with the Bromes? A—Yes, sir. Q—State whether you said to him this in substance: That it was your recollection that Mr. Connell did ask him particularly with reference to the attorneys for plaintiff, and mentioned the names of Clinton Bromie and Harry Bromie? A—Yes, sir. Q—After you both had gone out into the jury room, did you state in the presence of the other jurors that you had had a talk with Gard, and he said that Bromie was his attorney, wherein Impey was suing him in justice court, and that one of the Bromes had been his attorney? A—Yes, sir. Q—And after you came out, and in the presence and hearing of the rest of the jurors, was there considerable talk among all the jurors concerning whether or not Mr. Connell had inquired of Gard whether he knew the Bromes? A—Yes, sir. Q—And didn't some juror remark this in substance: That you are in a bad way to have made a statement that you had, when being examined as a juror, in view of the fact which you then admitted, that one of the Bromes had represented him in the Impey case? A—Yes, sir. Q—After this discussion regarding the Impey case, and admission that he had been acquainted with the Bromes, did not Gard say this in substance, that he wanted to speak to you over the instructions, and did he not commence to read the instructions over, and after doing so, or attempting to do so, state that he was satisfied and was then ready to join the other jurors in returning a verdict for the defendant? A—Yes, sir. Q—State what did he do with relation to reading the instructions? A—Well, he took the instructions, and he read them, and I suppose he was reading them; he was reading quite a while; he says, "Now you fellows—"
