'Pardon me, Count," interrupted one of the brokers, "shall I try to make an appointment for you with Mr. Blithers? I hear he is in town for a few days."

Count Quinnox looked to Truxton King for inspiration, and that gentleman favored him with a singularly dispiriting nod of the head. The old Graustarkian cleared his throat and rather stiffly announced that he would receive Mr. Blithers if he would call on him at the Ritz that afternoon. "What!"

exclaimed both agents, half-starting from their chairs in amazement.

The Count stared hard at them. 'You may say to him that I will be in

"He'll tell you to go to—ahem!"

The speaker coughed just in time.
"Blithers isn't in the habit of going out of his way to - oblige anybody. He wouldn't do it for the Emperor of Germany.

"But," said the Count with a frosty nile, "I am not the Emperor of Germany.

"Better let me make an appointment for you to see him at his office. It's just around the corner." There was a pleading note in the speaker's voice.

"You might save your face, Calvert, by saying that the Count will be pleased to have him take tea with him at the Ritz," suggested King.

exclaimed Calvert scorn-"Tea!" fully. "Blithers doesn't drink the

"It's a figure of speech," said King patiently.

"All right, I'll telephone," said the other dubiously.

HE CAME back a few minutes later with a triumphant look in his eye.

"Blithers says to tell Count Quinnox he'll see him tomorrow morning at half-past eight at his office. Sorry he's engaged this afternoon."

"But did you say I wanted him to have ten with us?" demanded the Count, an angry flush leaping to his cheek.

 "I did. I'm merely repeating what he said in reply. Half-past eight, at his office, Count. Those were his words."

"It is the most brazen exhibition of insolence I've ever—" began the Count furiously, but checked himself with an effort. "I—I hope you did not say that I would come, sir!"

"Yes; it's the only way

"Well, be good enough to call him up again and say to him that I'll -I'll see him damned before I'll come to his office tomorrow at eight-thirty or at any other hour." And with that the Count got up and stalked out of the office, putting on his hat as he did

"Count," said King, as they de-scended in the elevator, "I've got an idea in my head that Blithers will be at the Ritz at four."

"Do you imagine, sir, that I will receive him?"

"Certainly. Are you not a diplomat?"

"I am a Minister of War," said the Count, and his scowl was an indication of absolute proficiency in the science.

"And what's more," went on King, reflectively, "it wouldn't in the least surprise me if Blithers is the man behind the directors in this sudden move of the banks."

"My dear King, he displayed the keenest interest and sympathy the other night at your house. He-

"Of course I may be wrong," admit-ted King, but his brow was clouded. Shortly after luncheon that day, Mrs. Blithers received a telegram from her husband. It merely stated that he was going up to have tea with Count Quinnox at four o'clock, and not to worry as "things were shaping themselves nicely."
