His Constant Embarrasament. "I am not aware of having any tachable apparatus inside of me. On the contrary, if I were to interpret myself, would say that my constant embarrassment is to restrain the emotions that are inside me. You may not believe it, but I sometimes feel like a fire from a far distant volcane, and if the lava does not seem to spill over it is because you are not high enough to see into the basin and see the cauldron boil. Becaute, truly, gentlemen, in the position which I occupy there is a sort of passionate sense of being connected with my fellow men in a peculiar relationship of responsibility. I am listening: I am diligently trying to collect all the brains that are borrowable in order that I may not make more blunders than it is inevitable that a man should make who has great limitations of knowledge and capacity. And the emotion of the thing is so great that I suppose I must be some kind of a mask to conceal it. I really feel sometimes as if I were masquerading when I catch a picture of myself in some printed description. In between things that I have to do as a public officer I never think of myself as the president of the United States, never had any sense of being identified with that office. I feel like a person appointed for a certain length of time to administer that office and I fed just es much outside of it at this momen as I did before I was elected to it.

FASHIONS

This store has created for itself an enviable reputation for fashions of the more genteel sort.

It has never favored and has never promoted the demand for that class of fashions which offend the sense of the proprieties. It has steadfastly held to the theory that real style was a matter of refined up-to-dateness rather than a chase after the ludicrous or ridiculous. Today, when the fashion makers seem to have recognized the principle which we have striven for, it congratulates the fashion world, thanks its patrons for their interest in good styles and invites the public to an exposition of refined styles which is to be found in no other local store. No show pieces, every garment is our own and aesigned for practical service.

The cycle of Time has made a complete revolution and today we have, in a modified and modernized adaptation, the Fashions made famous by dainty Dolly Madison, first lady of the land, and her contemporaries, in the early part of the 19th Century. As a rule you are not so much concerned about fashions as are women folks—and fashions for you do not change as quickly. Yet, there is a steady advance. This store adopts the same policy in regard to its men's and young men's wear as it adopts towards its women's wear. It strives for refinement and is steadily building up a big apparel business among men folks who appreciate real elegance and stylishness at moderate pricings.

Spring Suits by Sam'l W. Peck and Stein-Bloch are superb, the most notable feature being patch pocket effects on some of the models. We'd like the privilege of showing you through the line.

President Walker referred to the plans onceived by Chairman J. J. Foster of the teachers' committee of the board and by other members to curtail expenses by abolishing the teachers' training school, reducing the teaching staff of the Central high school and eliminating the summer vacation school.

"We will economize, but we will do it intelligently," said President Walker, "and you need have no fear that the school system of the city will be injured. President Walker said there would be no "radical" move to economize, but that whatever was done would be done in a safe, sane manner.

PARIS, March 21 .- Two former premers of France, Joseph Caillaux and Ernest Monis, and the chief public prosecutor of the republic, Victor Fabre, were questioned today by a parliamentary ommittee concerning their acts and motives in hindering the trial of the banker Henri Rochette, who, it is averred, duped investors out of $3,000,000 and ultimately escaped punishment.

The death of Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figure, at the hands of Mme. Caillaux, caused this secret page in the judicial bistory of the country to be reopened. Many of its phases, still obscure, are likely to be unrolled by this inquiry with its background of intense public feeling. Deep personal and political rivalries are interwoven with the atstrange transactions.

While M. Calllaux, restless and with an air of suppressed passion, replied to questions asked him by members of the mmittee, the bells for M. Calmette's uneral were tolling. Judge from my picture as to the truth of what I say to you—that the crowning feminine attribute is a bust of beautiful proportions, tirmness and exquisite development. Then ask yourself how much you would like to have such a photograph of yourself, showing the glory of womanhood, with it's lines of infinite charm and grace. It would be worth far more than a two-cent stamp, would it not? Then let me give you my message—let me tell you of what I have learned and let me give you recent pictures of myself to prove what I say—for if you will write me today

Will Tell You How-FREE

I will tell you gladly and willingly. Why should any woman neglect on opportunity to escape the pain and heartache of being skinny, scrawny, angular and unattractive in body? Misery is not our heritage. Nature planned that you—a woman—should have the rich, pulsing lines of warm, living flesh molded after the mother of us all, the description of who perfumes our sacred literature with love and admiration for the divinity of woman's form. For why should there be that pitiful aspect—the face of a woman and the form of a man.
