Following is the girls' dining rooms at the university were not maintained to their the list of entries to date:

the girls' dining rooms at the university were not maintained to their liking. In protest against the conditions which followed a change in management, and on account of their complaints being ignored, they re-fused to eat and did not renew their patronage of the school cafes until the college authorities intervened in their behalf. News of the "hunger strike" was suppressed by the university au-thorities, but finally leaked out through letters which the "militant" co-eds wrote home. The parents and friends of Mias Gross in Omaha have learned of her part in the uprising from letters which they have just re-ceived, telling the details of the strike from the viewpoint of the stridents. Miss Gross is a 1910 Graduate of the Omaha High school and is now a junior at the University of Chicago.

The Spring Opening Emphasizes These Facts

-that the Brandeis Stores are Fashion's headquarters in Omaha, that they occupy a unique place in the esteem of discriminating women, apart from the commonplace.

that our connections with the style designers and fashion authorities of New York and Paris are sympathetically and instantly responsive to every correct style influence. Often a distinctly new mode will appear at Brandeis within thirty-six hours after its "arrival" in New York.

-that this store is shown a decided preference by the world's best makers in being chosen as their representative in this vicinity.

-that the long established style leadership of this store is sustained and continually growing.

The First Complete Exposition of Spring Styles

-in	Coats	-in	Suits	-in	Dresses
-in	Waists	-in	Skirts	—in	Millinery

The educational value of these displays is recognized by every fashionable woman of Omaha and vicinity. It permits an intimate acquaintance to be gained of the correct and exclusive modes such as can seldom be seen except in the best shops of New York and Paris.

We cordially invite your attendance Thursday.
