OLD LONDON BANK CLOSES

Chaplin, Milne, Grenfell & Co. Forced to Close Doors.

GRAND TRUNK SCHEME CAUSE

Large Loans Were Made to Arthur Grenfell, Who Attempted to Get Control of the Canadian Road.

LONDON, June 6.—Chaplin, Milne, Grenfell & Co., limited, the well-known firm of merchants and bankers in Princes Street, suspended today. The company was registered in 1892 to take over the business of Merton, Chaplin & Co., (formerly Merton, Rose & Co.), its authorized capital is $1,500,000.

The firm is an old established house, with high reputation and excellent family connection. It conducted a general and private banking and a company for promoting business. The directors include Ernest Chaplin, G. Grenfell Milne and R. W. Skipwith.

The failure is believed to be the result of large operations in Grand Trunk by Arthur Morton Grenfell, who was formerly a member of the firm and whose dealings recently have been the subject of such gossip. It is said that several Canadian and other companies wherein he was interested are involved. Earl Grey, whose daughter was Grenfell's first wife, is reported among the heavy losers.

Powerful banking and other interests have been working for some weeks to re-establish Grenfell's affairs in the interest of many stockholders of the companies he controlled.

The firm recently issued a notice that Grenfell had not been connected therewith since February 17.

The affairs of the bank were largely involved with those of the Canadian agency, limited, which is controlled by Arthur Grenfell. He and the Canadian agency had been engaged in a campaign for the purchase of a controlling interest in the Grand Trunk railway, but when those securities depreciated, the obligations he had created were taken over by a strong group of financial houses in order to protect the many stock exchange firms involved.

The bank's losses through loans to Grenfell and withdrawals of business consequent on his operations, caused the bank to suspend. It is believed, however, to be entirely solvent, but time will require to liquidate the assets in order that depositors may be paid.

The Grand Trunk transaction attempted by Grenfell is considered as one of the most daring stock operations launched here in years.

The members of Grenfell's family are coming to his assistance in the settlement of his affairs.

Affect on New York. NEW YORK, June 6.—The suspension of Chaplin, Milne, Grenfell & Co., excited some surprise in this market, private assurances having been received here a fortnight ago, when Arthur Grenfell's embarrassment became generally known, that the firm was in no wise involved.

So far as known, Chaplin, Milne & Grenfell had no commitments or interests in this market and at no time was the firm active in Americans.

BIG MONEY FROM WASTE

Hundreds of Millions Realized from Things Once Thrown Away.

At the first annual banquet of the national association of waste material dealers, held in New York City this week, it was brought out that by collecting and utilizing waste products the members of the associated transaction an annual business of $700,000,000.

The utilization of cotton-seed oil and of cotton seed, until very recent years a waste product of the cotton crop, it was pointed out, is now valued in the United States alone at $20,000,000 a year.

The Curtis Guild, ambassador to Russia, noted that we are now exporting steel strings to Europe to be turned into tooth brushes; that we are using the worn-out painter's brush, soaked with white lead, by cleansing and using the worn bristles to provide inexpensive and durable scrubbing brushes, and exporting American cotton stockings to Europe, where they are unraveled and used as a cheap packing in the manufacture of graphophones and electrical machinery.

Not having any other use, are exported from Europe to this country for their only possible use as paper stock.

The exports and imports of waste material are not yet thoroughly reported by the department, and even the commencement of their appearance in the official publications of the United States government dates back but a few years. For the calendar year 1913, we exported cotton rags to the value of $500,000, paper of over $200,000, woolen rags to the value of $1,000,000, scrap iron to the value of $1,200,000, old and reclaimed rubber to the value of $1,000,000, and scrap brass to the value of $2,000,000.

The figures of the imports of waste material from foreign countries are even more striking. In the year 1913 we imported scrap iron to the value of $500,000, old copper to the value of $1,000,000, milk waste to the value of $3,000,000, old rubber to the value of more than $8,000,000, cotton rags to the value of $3,000,000, and other paper stock which was netted cotton rags or wood pulp to the value of nearly $2,000,000.—Bradstreet's Review.

AUTOISTS FIND ROADS GOOD AFTER BIG RAIN

Belden's eyes popped out of his head and he was prepared to kid this fellow of the pie tin star, but a second look convinced him the latter was in dead earnest.

They started to drive drolly to the station. Along came T. C. Byrne's car, Byrne and his crowd joined in the funeral procession to the police station.

Then out came a merchant of University Place, who had his head working. "What's the matter with you?" he demanded of the marshal.

The merchant was a Mr. Weinberger. He rode to the station with the crowd and when Belden and Selby appeared hats in hand crest-fallen and bewildered before the majesty of the police judge, Mr. Weinberger took the floor and declared he would personally shoulder all the responsibility for the Omaha boosters, and insisted that they be allowed to go on their way without further molestation.

It was so ordered, and in a half hour the humiliated twain overtook the rest of the party.

Roads Withstand Big Rain.

Good roads was all the party could think of all the way home. The reason was simple. For there were three and one-half inches of rain at Lincoln and almost as much between Lincoln and Omaha and Lincoln and Cortland, and yet the cars came over roads smooth and hard as marble almost the whole of the way from Beatrice which place they left shortly after 9 o'clock in the morning.

Only four miles south of Cortland and a few miles north of Cortland did the party strike real mud. Here the roads had not been worked down hard before the rain. Here all had to put on chains, and plow mud with some difficulty. After that the roads proved to be roads that have long had the application of the King Crag system, and although water lay in pools in the cornfields on either side of the road, the road itself smooth and rounded, had turned the water like a barn roof, and stretched grey and dry before the tourists.

The fear that the roads might not be so well worked in the southeastern part of the state led to the abandonment of that part of the original itinerary, and to the returning of the party directly from Beatrice instead of finishing the proposed route.

Rooster Commits Suicide.

This is the story of the pathetic finish of a rooster who refused to observe the Wisconsin eugenic statute.

He was an imported brown fellow, a game cock owned by Harvey Sonneman, and he now lives in a grave. This is the reason:

Mr. Gamecock was head of a flock of hens, but in the brood from which the hens were hatched were a couple of ducks, and the gamecock and the ducks became home companions.

All winter they fed together, but in the spring the hens asserted their rights. In their jealousy they pecked at the ducks and the latter were so severely injured that it was necessary to kill them.

Then the rooster ended his life by willful starvation.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

For Amateur Gardeners.

The thing to plant in your hot bed is, of course, peppers.

To have cucumbers early, order them in time for the grocer's first delivery. You can avoid backache from gardening by hiring a man to do the work.

A good place to put pens is next to the lamb chops. To raise cabbage quickly, place them on the dumb water and pull the tops. Seeds can now be purchased stuck of tapes. If you plant this kind, keep a careful lookout for tapeworms. You may procure a few fresh leeks to savor your spring salad by boring gimlet holes in a roof during a shower.—Boston Transcript.
