TEDDY FIRES OPENING GUN In Pittsburgh Speech He Attacks Penrose, Criticizes Wilson. NOT HOLDING OUT OLIVE BRANCH Appeals to Individual Republicans, but Suggests No Dealing with the G. O. P. as an Organism.

PITTSBURGH, July 1.—Former President Roosevelt made last night his first speech of the 1914 campaign. He spoke enthusiastically in Pittsburgh, and was a program alone, he contended, proved the inadequacy of the democratic party. "It is and always will be," he said, "the state's rights party, the party-afraid-of-power."

He spoke a word concerning those whom the progressives would welcome to the party. "We will gladly work," he said, "with any men who will themselves with open sincerity work for these progressive principles, provided that they are men of such character as to justify confidence in their good faith. In this spirit we ask all good citizens to co-operate with us when, as here in Pennsylvania, we hold aloft the flag of good citizenship and fight to translate these sound and lofty principles into governmental practice."

It was apparent as soon as Colonel Roosevelt began to speak that he did not possess his former strength and vigor. There was a noticeable change in his manner as compared with that of two years ago when he was engaged in his previous campaign. Colonel Roosevelt made the trip to Pittsburgh against the advice of his physician and it was felt that his health would go far toward indicating to what extent he would be able to take part in the progressive party's battle of the next four months.

He spoke tonight with comparative ease, after the first few sentences, but there was a huskiness in his voice which showed that his throat was still troubling. It was a huskiness that he could not hear him. His gestures were less rapid and vigorous than of old, and as he neared the end of his speech he was plainly weary.

Colonel Roosevelt publicly recognized the difficulties under which he was laboring. "A man in the crowd called out something which he could not hear," the colonel said, "and yet you have a good voice." Colonel Roosevelt coined a new phrase in tonight's speech. It was what he called "Government by Convulsion." By this, he said, he meant the passing back and forth of power between the republican and democratic parties which he said would happen unless the people instructed their power to the progressive party.

The former president's speech was regarded by progressive leaders here as an indication of the line of attack which the party would follow in this year's campaign. It was an uncompromising speech. Before he made it the report had gone out that he would hold out an olive branch to the republican party, but he made no hint of such a thing in his remarks.

Attacks Penrose 'unparliamentary'. He appealed to individual republicans to support the progressive ticket but suggested no dealings with the republican party as an organization. He denounced the republican leaders, who, he said, had misapprehended the people's will. He attacked Lord Penrose unparliamentarily. "Let him go in sackcloth and ashes," he said, "because it is owing to him and his associates that the democratic party now has power to do wrong. No more scandalous appeal could be made than to return him to power to right the wrongs for which he is primarily responsible."

The Wilson administration's policies, Colonel Roosevelt said, were responsible for backward business and unemployment. No progress had been made, he said, toward solution of the trust question and on this point he went into what he later said was the most comprehensive statement of his position he had ever made.

Judging from appearance, it might have been thought that the campaign was in full swing and that it was October instead of June. On the all day ride from New York Colonel Roosevelt was greeted by crowds of varying size at the stations. On his arrival here he was greeted by several thousand persons who blocked the streets near the station and cheered him. He drove directly to a department store dining hall, where 1,700 progressives were having dinner. The colonel made a brief speech there and hurried to his private apartment, where he delivered his principal address.

Of the "bosses," Mr. Roosevelt said, that he has jurisdiction—that they thwarted the rank and file of the republican party by the nomination of Taft at Chicago and in so doing "deliberately put the democratic organization and Mr. Wilson into power."

In conclusion, the colonel sketched the progressive idea of needed anti-trust legislation by properly empowered commissions, contrasting such proposals with legislation now pending at Washington, which he found woefully inadequate. Such a program alone, he contended, proved the inadequacy of the democratic party. "It is and always will be," he said, "the state's rights party, the party-afraid-of-power."

He spoke a word concerning those whom the progressives would welcome to the party. "We will gladly work," he said, "with any men who will themselves with open sincerity work for these progressive principles, provided that they are men of such character as to justify confidence in their good faith. In this spirit we ask all good citizens to co-operate with us when, as here in Pennsylvania, we hold aloft the flag of good citizenship and fight to translate these sound and lofty principles into governmental practice."

It was also stated that Villa was much in need of locomotives for his campaign southward and that this was his reason for hurrying northward to Torreon instead of pursuing the whirlwind campaign he had mapped out.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., July 1.—The definite statement that the proposed trip of General Carranza to meet General Villa in Torreon would be "beneath the dignity of the first chief" and that therefore Carranza had sent personal representatives was made at constitutional headquarters in Agua Prieta today.

It was also stated that Villa was much in need of locomotives for his campaign southward and that this was his reason for hurrying northward to Torreon instead of pursuing the whirlwind campaign he had mapped out.

LYFORD and Hanson are already candidates on the bull moose ticket, and the meeting was called to fill in the gaps. W. T. White will file for attorney general and some man in Omaha, whose name no one would divulge, will run for lieutenant governor.

After J. S. Bishop of Lincoln had announced that the farmers were opposed to the houses in the old parties, Corrick, without asking for a vote, ordered the meeting to go into secret session and all who were not bull moose to get out. Railway Commissioner Hall and three reporters immediately left the room. Harry Sackett, candidate for governor, was not present.

MILFORD, Neb., July 1.—(Special.)—Christopher Courtwright, the last surviving Mexican war veteran in this county and possibly the state, died Sunday morning at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Carlton Mason, in this village.

After the Mexican war Uncle Christ and his brother made a trip to California, returning to Illinois in the late '50s. Christopher Courtwright came to Nebraska in 1875, locating near Milford, where he had made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Mason since that time. He had never had any serious illness before the present time, never having been confined to his bed, not even two weeks ago.
