

By MELLIFICIA.

Monday, July 6, 1914.

JUST as we women are returning to the styles of our grandmothers, I notice that the men are returning to older styles, too.

For the last four or five years the men have been wearing white ducks or white or gray flannel suits for golfing—in fact, the regular tennis costume—but now I notice the leaders of style among the men are returning to the knickerbocker costume, first introduced by our Pilgrim fathers and usually worn by the Scotch devotees of golf, the Scotchman being the one original golfer.

Hal McCord, who may be seen almost any day on the Country club course, was one of the first to return to this style, and many others quickly followed suit.

Thursday was ladies' luncheon day at Happy Hollow, and following luncheon we played golf. Playing just ahead of us was Thomas J. Kelly. He was indeed "the glass of fashion and the mould of form, the observed of all observers," for he wore the newest in golf attire, the pepper and salt knickerbockers, with black stockings with white stripes at the top.

George Simpson, the Country club professional, wears this same attire. Charles Johnston, the Happy Hollow professional, wears the knickerbockers for tournaments. G. M. Durkee of Happy Hollow has also adopted the new style.

Jack Hughes, president of the Field club and ex-state champion, and Dr. Summay and Albert Cahn, all expert golfers of the Field club, wear the knickerbocker costume for playing.

M. C. Peters of the Country club played at Palm Beach last winter and says all of the men were wearing the knickerbockers for golf in the south.

RENZE MISSES FINE CHANCE

Samson's Chief "Devil" Almost Takes Trip to Another World.

WHILE CELEBRATING FOURTH

Artisan Receives Elevating Experience When He Attempts to Get Rid of Some Ancient Chemical Mixture.

Omaha's most novel Fourth of July celebration was held at Gus Renze, chief "devil" of the "Devil's Hotel" at the Ak-Sar-Ben den. And Gus had to admit afterward that the celebration was decidedly unexpected by him, and that he was lucky not to have been lured to a hospital as a result.

Six years ago he had concocted a typical "Gus Renze" mixture of sodium and magnesium, to be used as an explosive in one of the stunts at the den. Fearing that it might be dangerous to use, he put it in the cellar, out of harm's way, and never touched it until last Saturday, when he decided to destroy it before any trouble resulted.

He placed it outdoors, back of the den, over a tank of water, and planned to explode the stuff by knocking it with a shotgun charge into the water. When he did so, the explosion tore a huge hole in the ground, nearly knocking a hole in the side of the building, scattered the famous Ak-Sar-Ben bull and other animals with the burning substance and the hot water, and almost sent Gus on a permanent visit to happy hunting grounds.

"Never again," he remarked, when he picked himself up and tried to quiet the pandemonium among the animals. "I'm for a safe and sane Fourth hereafter."
