IDEAL PLACE TO RAISE STOCK

General Manager Howe of Armour's Believes Cattle Will Eventually Be Shipped North and South to Meet Weather Conditions. H. C. Howe, general manager for Armour & Co., is authority for the statement that the high price of meat may be curtailed by using the broad mesas of Mexico for breeding and maturing the cattle. He thinks that after the cattle have grown to sufficient size they could be shipped north for finishing on the feed lots of the Missouri valley.

According to General Manager Howe, the mild climate of Mexico and the abundant feed grasses in the fertile part of the country make the raising of cattle there less expensive than in any other country in the world. In the winters the cattle of Mexico need no sheds or special protection. Mr. Howe thinks that when the cattle have passed a year or two they could be shipped to the northern feed lots and fattened for the market.

In the last few years Texas stockmen have learned the lesson of shipping their cattle north during the dry, hot season of midsummer. Some of the northern cattle dealers have lately been considering the propriety of shipping their cattle south during the extreme cold weather. Probably the idea will develop gradually.

According to an old stockman at the yards, the practice of shipping the cattle north and south during the different seasons will grow. "It is according to the custom of nature," said the cattleman. "Take the buffalo; the herds traveled hundreds of miles from feeding ground to another in the spring and in the fall. In the fall the buffalo ranged south, while the summer season saw them in the cool valleys of the north. The herds grew and thrived by such practice. The same will be true of the cattle industry when railroad rates have been properly adjusted."

Seth Low Resigns After Thirty-Three Years on Columbia Board.

WORK OF N. E. A. CONVENTION Sessions at St. Paul Praised with Great Interest to Educators and for Future of Public School.

A connection of a generation was broken when the resignation of former Mayor Seth Low from the Columbia university Board of Trustees took effect. The resignation was accepted some time ago, but on June 30 came to an end a period in which Mr. Low was identified with Columbia, thirty-three years as a trustee, eleven years of which, from 1899 to 1900, he was president of the university.

During that time Columbia has grown from several unrelated schools to the country's largest university, in which many institutions of learning, each large enough to be considered separately, are knit around Columbia college, the original center. Another transition is seen in the spacious campus and lofty buildings of Morningside Heights, which have supplanted the former small headquarters in East Forty-ninth street. A third growth is in the development of the university council, which at first was a mere advisory cabinet of the president.

Better Growth Than Buildings. But Mr. Low, in a talk to a reporter for The World, placed the gradual building up of Columbia's teaching staff which has taken place in the last thirty years far above the towering buildings, the coordination of the various schools and the formation of the university council.

Mr. Low's sentiment is today the same as it was when he was inaugurated as Columbia's president, February 2, 1880. On that occasion he said: "The value of Columbia lies not in its conspicuousness, but in its quiet and permanent value to the city in the constant witness it bears to the usefulness and nobility of the intellectual life, and in the work it is always doing to uphold the life." This, he believes, can only be brought about by a teaching staff of high standards.

Mr. Low, at the commencement exercises of Columbia university last month, received an honorary degree of doctor of laws in commemoration of his long work as a trustee, and a statement was then made that he would still be credited as an honorary member, with the privilege of attending any meetings of the board.

FREMONT COLLEGE NOTES.

Summer Classes Are Enthusiastic Over Their Work. The expression class has completed the study of "The Bell," by Edgar Allan Poe, and is now working on the "Merchant of Venice."

One of the most interesting and fascinating classes in college this summer is the work that is being done in the physical culture department under the direction of Miss Julia Kriest and Miss Eva Mixer. The class meets at 12:30 every day in the old chapel from which the seats have been removed and space is ample for the 150 students, who are taking this work. The folk games and dances have been introduced and the drills are so interesting that they call out a number of visitors.

"Mid Summer Night's Dream," is being studied by the expression class and will be presented August 3 in audience hall. Also "The Rose Maiden," a musical drama, directed by John W. Phillips, will be given July 24. The soloists are Messrs. Novotny and Phillips, and Mesdames Gaines and Ray.

The art department, under Mrs. A. M. Reynolds, has the largest number of students the department has registered for several years. The work being displayed by those in the studio this summer is very attractive and shows excellent instruction.

The annual faculty picnic will take place a week from Saturday if the weather is favorable. This is an event looked forward to with great pleasure by the large number, which includes not only the members of the faculty, but their families.

Miss Eva Ensminger, private secretary to President Clemmons, left Friday morning for Pierre, to spend Saturday and Sunday with her father and mother.

MOUNT SAINT JOSEPH.

Splendid College and Academy for Girls at Dubuque, Ia. One of the most important duties of parents to their daughters is the selection of a good school. In the development of a girl's character, school influences are telling factors. With this in mind, parents should remember that the choice of a school is a vital question. Many schools do excellent work for the average pupil in the ordinary studies of the curriculum; but it is not so easy to find a school that combines the best intellectual culture with the more important work of developing a healthy body and a strong character. In the problem of education, the question of environment and association is a very important one, and parents should choose a school which, besides its regular training, best represents the care and protection of the home.

An institution that is famous throughout the country for its efficiency in all lines is Mount St. Joseph College and Academy, Dubuque, Ia. Its training insures a thorough mental, moral and physical development, as well as the refinement and grace of manner that mark the woman of true culture.

Mount St. Joseph, which is under the direction of the Sisters of Charity, B. V. M., is situated on a picturesque eminence near the city of Dubuque. It commands a view of the Mississippi river, of Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois. The magnificent and thoroughly equipped buildings, which have a frontage of over 500 feet, include the college, academy, a beautiful chapel in the Romanesque style of architecture and a conservatory of music and art in the renaissance. The plan of the buildings is such that each room has a sun exposure for some hours of the day, and there are thorough systems of electric lighting and ventilation.

Athletics is an important, though not an overdone, feature of the curriculum, and the annual field meet held in May is one of the most delightful days of the year. For indoor exercises there is a finely equipped gymnasium and every instrument to healthful exercise is found on the grounds—golf, tennis courts, groves and pineries. The institution offers collegiate, academic, preparatory and commercial courses and has also a department of domestic science. The conservatory of music and art offers excellent advantages to the student. Lectures and recitals by eminent scholars and artists supplement the regular work of the school.

A catalogue containing views of the different departments and of the parks surrounding the college is published each year by the faculty of Mount St. Joseph.

HASTINGS COLLEGE NOTES.

New Work for the Coming Year is Being Added. Hastings college is adding new work for the coming year. Apparatus is now being ordered for installation in the new domestic science department. Miss Helen Hornsby, who is a graduate of the Manhattan School of Domestic Science and Household Art, which gives a strong four-year course in that subject, and who has had experience in her home town of Lawrence, Kan., and has been assisting during the last year at the School of Agriculture at Manhattan, Kan., has been employed to take charge of that work. She will also give a course in art, which will include china painting.

Miss Ruth Fitchett, a graduate of the normal, public school music and piano courses of the New England conservatory, who has had charge of the public school music in the school of the Good Shepherd at Asbury Park, N. J., comes to Hastings next year as an assistant in piano and instructor of public school music. She is a choice woman, finely equipped for the work which she will have in college.

W. F. Raney, the Nebraska Rhodes scholar, who took his degree from Oxford about a year ago and who has spent the last year on the continent of Europe in study at German universities, has been chosen to take charge of the public courses in European and English constitutional history. He will also have charge of classes in public speaking. Mr. Raney left the senior class of Hastings college three years ago last January.

Dr. Paul Curry, Iowa state quarterback, who has recently been the coach of the university freshmen team at Iowa City, will move to Hastings soon and will have charge of the foot ball squad at Hastings college in the fall.

The executive committee of the Hastings presbytery met at Hastings last week and a number of the men came out to visit the college while here. These included Rev. Mr. Knauer of Nelson, Rev.

CIVICS IN THE SCHOOLS.

Importance of the Subject Pointed Out by High Authority. At the Boston convention of the Institute of Instruction, Arthur W. Dunn of the United States Bureau of Education, spoke on civics in the elementary and high schools.

Mr. Dunn's paper was principally concerned with the best way of conducting a course in civics in a public school. He admitted that it was difficult to judge the efficiency of a course in civics, since it dealt more with future than present results. However, when we consider that everyone who is a member of a community, even if he is a child, is in a broad sense a citizen, we find a course in civics may be judged by its ability properly to interest a child in public affairs. He defines a good course in civics as one which should appeal to the individual, should instill the proper civic motives in the mind of the pupil, stimulate a spirit of co-operation, develop good judgment and initiative, and, at the same time, contain subject matter commensurate with the experience of the student. An informal discussion between the class, with the teacher as much in the background as possible, is the best means of attaining all these requirements.

KEARNEY STATE NORMAL.

Much Interest in the Rural Life Conference. Much interest was manifested in the rural life conference held at the normal on Saturday afternoon and evening, July 18. A. C. Monahan, rural expert from the bureau of education, Washington, D. C., lectured in the afternoon on "The County Unit of Organization for the Management of the Rural Schools." He gave an illustrated lecture in the evening on "Consolidation." Mrs. S. H. Blumett in honor of Mrs. Monahan, gave a talk on "The Ideal Community" in the afternoon.

Picking by counties by the summer students seems to be the favorite amusement, the Nuckolls county picnic being followed by one held by the Howard county delegation on Friday evening.

On Monday morning Prof. Anderson of the department of history gave a chapel talk on the national song of Scotland. This will be followed by talks on national songs of other countries.

A very pleasant party was given by Miss Gardner and Miss Caldwell in honor of Miss Rothwell, whose resignation as a faculty member takes effect at the close of the summer school.

A trio, composed of Misses Miriam Anderson, Georgia Botsford and Marie Troupe, delighted Friday's convocation. The program also included a solo by each member. These young women are all members of the class of 1914, having prepared themselves for music supervisors.

Time was when a storekeeper, wholesaler or manufacturer would say: "Well the young man doesn't know anything about the business, but looks as though he had sense enough to LEARN." But—It's so vastly different NOW.

An entirely "green" applicant makes a business man shudder. Unskilled hands—untrained minds—an utter ignorance of office methods and office appliances agitates the modern man of commerce much as the red flag agitates a bull. In fact the business man rather admires some ego upon your part these days. He wants to see that you have made the most of yourself—sometimes he quotes this line from Shakespeare: "Self love is not so vile a sin as self neglecting."

You must know something of bookkeeping BEFORE you ask for a position as bookkeeper. You must master the intricacies of a typewriting machine before you can actually be a typist on a salary. You must have a working knowledge of shorthand before you seek a job as stenographer. And a TRAINING course DOESN'T cost much. Indeed, the training you COULDN'T have gotten

WATERMAN HALL.

Chicago Diocesan School for Girls Celebrates Silver Anniversary. Waterman Hall, Steamers, Ill., observed the silver anniversary of its academic work on June 2, 1914. It was founded by Mrs. Abbie L. Waterman of Steamers on January 9, 1889, by the gift of her residence and sixty acres of land, together with liberal provision for the erection of suitable buildings and the maintenance of the school by liberal endowments. It has attained a position, attracting patronage of as many as it could handle all these years. Rev. B. Frank Fleetwood, D. D., has been in charge of the school from its beginning.

While it seeks its patronage from the middle west, it draws a large amount from Chicago, being the church school of the Episcopal diocese of that city. Over 1,000 former pupils, one-quarter of them being graduates, are referred to with pride.

PICKARD FORMER DETECTIVE SUES BURNS FOR $2,500

Frank M. Pickard, former Burns detective, who tried to lead astray court house officials for the Daily News, and who was released by Justice Britt, Friday, after a hearing on a charge of attempting to bribe County Commissioner Lynch, filed a suit for $2,500 against Burns in Kansas City Saturday. "This suit is for expenses incurred by me in my defense against the bribery charges," he said. "Under my contract with Burns he was to pay all my expenses, but he deserted me because I refused to send my personal attorney home and let others dictate my defense. Other suits will follow."
