Grand Army Vets to Stop in Omaha

Nebraska Grand Army veterans will be in Omaha today en route to the national encampment at Detroit. All told, it is not thought that more than 100 will attend.

As the soldier train slowed down members of the regimental band left the train and while it was standing played a funeral dirge. At the same time the members of Company E of Danforth detained and presented arms as a tribute to the memory of the dead railroad official.

MAKE APPEALS TO HOWELL

Former Enemies in Civil War Indignantly Ask United States Attorney to Punish Unpatriotic Culprits.

Two veterans of the civil war, a Yank and a Johnny Reb, both showing evidence of time's unkindness, appeared before United States Attorney V. S. Howell to insist that he investigate an alleged desecration of the American flag at Springfield, Neb., a week ago and punish the guilty.

Saturday of last week at Springfield and it was largely attended by the pioneers of the vicinity. Two American flags, a great silken one and a small one, floated from the flagstaff in the center of the picnic grounds. During the second day a crowd of men gathered around the pole and one took a pistol and fired several shots through the small flag. Other men followed suit. The two veterans, each unacquainted with the other and neither knowing that the other was coming on the same mission, were not content to make their complaint by letter, but came in person. "I was a rebel, sir, and I fought through the war and cursed the Yank and their flag from 1861 to '65. But all that is over now. The Stars and Bars will be ever green in my heart, but the Stars and Stripes—may God eternally curse the man that desecrates them!" Mr. Howell sat in his chair in reverse for half an hour after the old man left, unmindful of his surroundings. A tender chord in his heart had been struck by the old man's appeal. He was still thinking of the imprisoned old fellow when in stammered the Yank.

Mr. Howell has turned the matter over to the United States marshal's office for investigation.
