

HOW TO CURE PYORRHOEA

The entire world is giving attention to the cure of the tooth. No good dentist wants to pull teeth; the opposite is the effort of the entire profession. Tooth saving is just what everyone is aiming to do. You know just how Miss Jones looks—she has nice hair, fine features, dresses with taste and care, but when she opens her mouth she shows horrid, dirty teeth, gnarled and knotted and yellow and black. "Rat teeth" some call them. Now there is no real necessity for this. When your teeth are full of tartar, when they rock to and fro, when they bleed and separate from the gums, you can remedy this condition over night if you will go to your drugist and get four ounces of Gild cream (you won't need more) and put a teaspoonful in your mouth night, noon and morning. The tartar will dissolve right away, the bleeding will be stopped, the separation from the gums will readily pass away, and your gums will be healthy, red and firm. The teeth will stop rocking and stay in the gums strong, the bacteria of the mouth from all the little cracks and crannies will be dissolved, washed out, destroyed. The little blisters and the puffy gum conditions pass away. No more dropping downward or forward of the teeth, no extraction for looseness, the pyorrhoea will no longer be a condition of the teeth. Soreness and tenderness will give way to ease and firmness. Advertise.

Prayers for Peace

In America people of every religion and every creed are praying for peace in Europe. These prayers are submitted by The Bee from the heads of the churches in Omaha

Submitted by RT. REV. RICHARD J. SCANNELL,
Bishop of Omaha Catholic Diocese.

In the Catholic church the prayer book indicates that prayer that shall be said when nations are at war. In the Omaha diocese Bishop Scannell has ordered it said by all priests at the daily mass. It follows:

"O God, from Whom all holy desires, right counsels and just works proceed, give to Thy servants that peace which the world cannot give; that, both our hearts being devoted to obey Thy commandments, and the fear of our enemies being removed, our times, by Thy protection, may be peaceful."

By RT. REV. ARTHUR L. WILLIAMS,
Bishop of the Episcopal Church in Nebraska.

O, Almighty God, Who rulest over all the kingdoms of the earth, and makest wars to cease in all the world, and Who didst send Thy blessed Son to preach peace to them that are far off, and to them that are nigh: Grant, we beseech Thee, of Thine infinite mercy, that the war now being waged amongst the nations of the world may speedily be brought to an end. Overrule the violence and ambition of men to the accomplishment of Thy gracious purposes, and to the extension of Thy kingdom; hasten the time when nation shall not lift the sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more; preserve our own people and land inviolate, and may our country do in righteousness the things that make for peace amongst those engaged in mortal strife. Minister in Thine infinite pity to those suffering war's calamities; restore the sick; heal the wounded; minister to the dying and bind up the broken heart.

These things we ask through the merits and mediation of the Prince of Peace, Thy Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord, Amen.

By BISHOP FRANK U. BRISTOL,
Methodist Episcopal Church.

Our prayer for the world's peace goes sobbing up to God this day from the hearts of a people who weep for the thousands slain and who pity those who mourn for them. Our written creeds, O God, are many, but our living faith is one—the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. In this great faith we pray. Thou art the God of the home and fireside, of the workshop and the mill, of the forest and the farm, of the playground and the school; Thou art the God of gentle women, of good, brave men, of innocent, laughing children. To Thee we pray, good Father of us all; to Thee we pray for peace. O, Thou Prince of Peace, send forth Thy spirit to hover over camp and battlefield, to stay and sheath the lifted swords and silence forever the death-dealing guns.

For the sake of the countless hosts of fair, brave youth who still go forth to war; for the sake of their mothers and sisters and sweethearts, who fear the fair and brave may not come back again; for the sake of the fathers of families and homes and of their wives and little ones, who wonder and weep and suffer alone; for the sake of our common humanity, our world-wide brotherhood; for the sake of the Christ whose angels sang, "Peace on earth, good will toward men," may war cease in all the world and may the peace of battle give place to the peace of peace and praise to the honor of the nations and the glory of our God. Amen.

By RABBI FREDERICK COHN,
Pastor Temple Israel.

O, Father of Peace, send peace to Thy distracted, erring children! Teach them to beat their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning hooks! Let nation cease to lift up sword against nation, or practice war any more. Plant sentiments of brotherhood in their hearts, that they may realize the iniquity as well as the enormity of war; how all war is civil war, fratricidal, the shedding of the blood of those who are blood-kin. O teach Teuton and Celt, Saxon and Slav, Aryan and Semite, the white and the yellow races, that they have all one Father; that one God has created them all! May they cease to deal treacherously and murderously with one another; may this war madness vanish as quickly as it arose! O soon may the nations march back in the triumph of peace to their own beloved lands, and each under his own vine and his own fig tree, with none to make him afraid, seek peace and pursue it!

O Thou who makest peace in heaven high, send peace upon earth and establish it forever on the impregnable foundations of righteousness and justice, of truth and love!

All this we ask in the name of humanity's highest interest, O Thou Lord of the hosts of peace-loving hearts throughout the world! Amen.

President Wilson has appointed Sunday, October 4, as a day for general prayer for peace in the world.

HOW ANIMALS 'SENSE' WATER

Marvelous Instinct that Enables Them to Detect Springs They Can't See.

The French possess a curious institution in the form of an institute of zoological psychology, established on a farm near Paris. This station comprises meadows and barnyards, a stretch of forest and a pond stocked with fish. Then, too, there are spacious buildings, including modern stables, a riding school, stalls for isolating animals under special observation, an aquarium and a laboratory. A dove-cote is placed upon the roof of the main building.

It is reported by a scientist that an important conclusion reached by the students is that some animals possess a special sense whereby they can detect the presence of water even though they cannot see it. The experiments were undertaken at the suggestion of an Australian, who addressed the institution with reference to his experiences with sheep and cattle when being driven across country.

In a place where the presence of water was wholly unexpected the Australian noted some curious facts. The leading animals suddenly would lift their heads and draw long breaths. Then they would abandon the beaten tracks and start running through the brush. Sometimes they would run for a mile and a half to two miles, and could not be stopped by the drivers, their course invariably leading to a pond or springs hitherto unknown. —New York Press.

BRITON HAS LONG WAR STEP

Infantry Step of Thirty-One and One-Half Inches Leads Among European Soldiers.

Soldiers are marching across Europe, but they do not keep step. They vary both in length of the step and the rapidity of their pace. The British infantry step is thirty-one and one-half inches, the longest of all the steps. Germany keeps step with Switzerland—they each do thirty-one inches, while twenty-nine inches is the pace the armies of Italy, France and Austria take. The Russians take the shortest step, twenty-seven and one-half inches, and only do 112 in a minute. The German infantryman does 114, the Austrian 115, and the French and Italian each manage 120. Consequently, to march a mile it takes the Russian twenty minutes, the Austrian eighteen and two-thirds minutes, the French and Italian eighteen minutes, while the German could beat this by ten or eleven seconds. —London Chronicle.

BUYING FOOD IN PACKETS

Phenomenal Development in Trade During Recent Years.

FOOD IN BULK THING OF PAST

Modern Methods of Cleanliness and Convenience Result in Great Change in the Ways of Handling Estates.

The impression one gets on entering the grocery department of any large store, that it is possible to obtain the great bulk of our food supplies in packets or tins, is to a very large extent a correct one. Within the last twenty years the amount of food of various kinds done up and placed on the market in packets, and tins has increased enormously. It may surprise many, however, to know that in the middle of the eighteenth century even cereal foods in packets were already being used to a considerable extent in Great Britain.

The phenomenal expansion of advertisement in recent years has been the means of establishing the proprietary article as an important factor in the people's food supplies, and, of course, a large proportion of food supplied in packets and tins comes within the category of proprietary. Each manufacturer of a specialty means to make the public conversant with the fact and to realize when it gets his products. Consequently he serves it up in packets or tins, which, of course, bear his name. In this way he certainly secures an advantage as compared with his predecessor, who sold his produce in bulk, and of whose name the consumer was seldom aware.

Science to the Rescue.
The more scientific preparation of many articles of food tends to further developments in the trade in food in packets and tins. Even were it possible to estimate the value of the produce packed in the United Kingdom we should still be a long way off the total, for great quantities of food in packets and tins are imported; the United States is a leading exporter. Some of our overseas dominions, moreover, are making rapid strides in the trade.

Just as it is impossible to estimate the value of the trade so it is impossible in the space available to review the various articles of food obtainable in packets and tins. Tea, coffee, cocoa, spices, cereals, salt, fruit, fish; these are but a few in a seemingly endless list. The fact remains, however, that the purchaser has become so accustomed to getting various articles in packets or tins that the variety has ceased to interest, or at least to be fully realized.

Cleanliness Also Counts.

On the point of cleanliness the consumer can, in general, rely upon foods in packets or tins being quite satisfactory. Their hygienic status is indeed often one of their chief recommendations. And today they are more hygienic than ever before on account of the superposition of hand-packing by mechanical means. As an illustration the case of tea in packets may be quoted. In one continuous operation the tea is blended, automatically weighed, and packed without being handled once. As with tea so with many other commodities. Of course, there are many more which do not lend themselves to packing by machinery, and which have, therefore, to be hand-packed. The conditions under which this is now done would, in the greater number of cases, reassure even the most fastidious. Though the bulk of the packing is done at the factories of the numerous manufacturers, there are now fewer stores of any importance in our leading cities where a very considerable amount of packing is not done.

Many of the commodities sold in packets and tins are also obtainable loose—that is, they are kept in bulk until a buyer places an order. Rolled oats are an example. With regard to certain commodities, and perhaps more especially certain cereals, there are those who contend that a higher quality is retained in bulk than when done up in small packets. On the other hand, when kept for a long time contamination is more to be feared in bulk than in packets. Again, in regard to certain articles which are put up in tins, the quicker this is done the better. Coffee is an outstanding example; the quicker it is put in sealed tins after roasting the greater the likelihood of its retaining its flavor.

Question of Expedience.

Whether it be best to pack a certain article in packets or tins depends upon the article. Some article will keep as long as necessary in the ordinary packet, while others keep better in tins. The introduction of mechanical appliances has, of course, reduced manufacturers' expenses. Even in regard to food packed by machinery there is a naturally considerable expense to be borne. Per packet or tin it may work out at a very small figure. The masses, however, are aware of the fractional difference in the article sold in packets and that in bulk—it may only amount to 1d per two or three pounds on cereals—and for that reason they adhere to the old fashion of buying at a store which carries a big supply in bulk.

Still, everything considered, the development of the trade in food in packets and tins has given general satisfaction to the consumer. Indeed the contention is frequently made that but for that development the masses at least would today still be without many articles of food which they have come to regard as necessary.

MIMICRY EARNED A VACATION

Jester Playing Dual Role Imitates Czar Nicholas I and Marshal of His Palace.

The court jester of Tsar Nicholas I, who was a skillful mimic, once decided that he would like a vacation and some money to spend, says the Bibliothek der Unterhaltung und des Wissens. So he presented himself at the office of the marshal of the palace to talk over the matter. While he was waiting in the anteroom the Tsar entered.

"What are you doing here, Martinow?" inquired Nicholas.

"I came here to ask the marshal for a leave of absence."

"Come along with me and I will present your case for you."

So the jester, in company with the marshal, entered the marshal's office and said to him, "I have a request to make in behalf of my friend here, but—and he turned to Martinow—"first you must make some fun of us."

Martinow was embarrassed. "I'm afraid I can't do it, your majesty, I haven't anything here to work with."

"Here, take my helmet."

Martinow put it on his head, threw out his chest and, assuming a haughty air, addressed the marshal in a tone exactly like that of the tsar—"Sir, how well are you satisfied with our jester, Martinow?"

Without waiting for the answer he took off the helmet, and, assuming the bearing of the marshal, he answered in the latter's tone of voice, "Very well satisfied, indeed, your majesty."

He then replaced the helmet on his head and said, imitating the tsar, "If you, sir, are satisfied with the jester, then we shall let him have a thousand rubles and a three months' leave of absence."

"Then, in the voice of the marshal, he said, 'It shall be done as you wish, your majesty; it shall be done.'"

The tsar laughed uproariously at this clever bit of dialogue and said graciously, "Since Martinow has ordered it in the name of the tsar, we must grant it. All right, Martinow, take care of yourself and good luck to you."

SEINE BROKE; FISH GET AWAY

Hard Luck of Boston Fishermen Who Struck a Big School of Mackerel.

After having been for eight weeks on the Cape Shore fishing grounds off Nova Scotia, seeking mackerel, the fishing schooner Veda McKown reached the fish pier with only 5,000 large, fresh and 127 barrels of salted mackerel in its hold. Crew members complained of the hard luck encountered during the trip, and after the schooner had tied up circulated the story of the breaking of a seine cost them about $2,000. On Monday the schooner encountered a large school of mackerel off Canoe. The seine boat was quickly launched and within a short time had circled the school with the seine. However, the seine broke as it was pulled, and all except the 5,000 mackerel which the schooner brought escaped.

The fishermen estimated that there were fully 20,000 fish in the school, and each of the 15,000 that got away would have been worth 15 cents at the fish pier today, that being the price quoted for large, fresh mackerel—Boston Globe.
